BHUSD appoints Cherniss as district superintendent

■ Former Beverly Vista teacher, administrator returns

BY TABOR BREWSTER

The Beverly Hills Unified School District Board of Education announced on April 10 the appointment of Dr. Alex Cherniss as the next superintendent. The decision was first approved in a closed session by the board in a 3-2 vote, with Board President Rachelle Marcus and Board Member Amanda Stern voting against the approval. However, in a public meeting on April 15, the board approved Cherniss' contract in a 5-0 vote.

"It's with great pleasure that I welcome Dr. Cherniss back, and I'm thrilled that he's going to be at the helm and I'm looking forward to working with him," Marcus said. "I have nothing but confidence in what he's going to do."

Marcus would not disclose why she initially voted against approving Cherniss as superintendent, citing the confidential nature of the closed session. However, she stated that Cherniss was the most quali-

"One of the qualities we felt we wanted was experience previously in other districts," Marcus said. "He filled that to the letter of the law."

She added that Cherniss' prior experience in Beverly Hills was

Judge sides with Menendez brothers in hearing

■ Resentencing to take place on April 17, 18

BY TABOR BREWSTER

A Los Angeles County Superior Court judge ruled in favor of the Menendez brothers on April 11, rejecting District Attorney Nathan Hochman's effort to withdraw a resentencing motion filed by the previous district attorney. The resentencing hearings will move forward on April 17 and 18.

Erik and Lyle Menendez were sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole in 1996 for the 1989 double murder of their parents, Jose and Kitty Menendez, at their home in Beverly Hills. However, new evidence suggesting the brothers were sexually abused by their father has opened the door for their possible resentencing, and calls for their release have grown louder following a Netflix series and documentary about the case.

The previous district attorney, George Gascón – who was defeated by Hochman in the Nov. 5, 2024, election – recommended the brothers be resentenced after reviewing evidence that suggests they were sexually abused by their father. Gascón said the brothers should be sentenced to 50 years to life in prison with the possibility of parole as opposed to the existing sentence of life in prison without the possibility of parole.

Hochman's effort to withdraw Gascón's recommendation was the subject of the April 11 hearing in Van Nuys Courthouse. Both brothers attended the hearing remotely, visible on a screen to the courtroom as they sat side by side at Richard J. Donovan Correctional Facility near San Diego.

Deputy District Attorney Habib Balian spent hours arguing that the brothers have not been rehabilitated, they have lied about the

L.A. churches rise on Easter Sunday

■ Local congregations open doors to community

BY RANCE COLLINS

For many congregations in the Los Angeles area, this year's Easter services will take on a special meaning.

"In times of tumultuous change, Easter offers us a grounding reminder of the changeless, eternal love of God," said Rev. Andrea McMillin, priest-in-charge of All Saints'. "The Easter season invites us to walk a sacred path, from the solemnity of Good Friday to the joy of Easter Sunday. In these uncertain times, joining in this journey through worship, music and prayer offers us a deep sense of peace, connection and community. Easter provides an opportunity to rest in God's enduring love, which remains constant no matter the challenges we face."

"The observance of Holy Week is a sacred time for Christians around the world," McMillin added. "It is a time for us to reflect on the significance of Christ's sacrifice and rejoice in the hope of His resurrection. We invite everyone to join us as we journey together through this holiest of weeks."

At All Saints, Maundy Thursday Missa Mystica service will include a holy eucharist and foot washing on April 17 at 7:30 p.m. The Good Friday service will follow on April 18 at 12:10 p.m., with a vigil of Easter gathering following on April 19 at 8 p.m. The church's weekend activities will culminate in its Easter Sunday celebration on April 20, with "festive" services at 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. An Easter egg hunt for children will be held after the second service. All Saints' Beverly Hills is located at 504 N. Camden Drive.

"All Saints' is an inclusive and welcoming community where everyone is accepted, no matter where you are on your faith journey," McMillin said. "Whether you are familiar with our community or this is your first time, we invite you to join us this Easter. Here, you will find a place where the eternal love

West Hollywood skips LA Pride for D.C.

BY RANCE COLLINS

While details of LA Pride have not been announced, one previous participant will not be returning to its Pride Parade on June 8. The city of West Hollywood, which will host its own Pride celebration the previous week, has opted instead to send a delegation to World Pride, which will be held in Washington, D.C., also on June 8.

Mayor Chelsea Byers said that the city’s presence at World Pride was a part of a larger message.

“With World Pride taking place in Washington, D.C. after many years outside of the U.S. and at such an important time in our country’s history – it is so important that West Hollywood be there to show our solidarity with queer communities around the world, learn from the security, safety and community building efforts, and ensure that West Hollywood Pride has a prominent spot on the global map of World Pride,” Byers said.

Since the Trump administration took office on Jan. 20, many alterations in plans for World Pride have occurred. For instance, events had been planned to be held at the Kennedy Center, but after President Donald Trump shuffled leadership at the organization, those events were either cancelled or moved to different venues.

“West Hollywood is proud to participate in World Pride in D.C. this year,” Councilman Danny Hang said. “It’s an incredible opportunity to highlight our city on the global stage. Our commitment to LGBTQ+ rights is unwavering, and we’ll continue celebrating Pride in a big way.”

same weekends,” Vice Mayor John Heilman said. “I know a number of people want to attend World Pride to express solidarity with the global LGBTQI movement and also protest the anti-LGBTQI actions of the current administration.”

WeHo Pride began in 2022, following a split between West Hollywood and Christopher Street West, the organization that runs LA Pride. For decades prior, LA Pride had been held in West Hollywood. Starting in 2022, the parade moved to Hollywood and its annual festival was moved downtown. West Hollywood had floats in the LA Pride parade, however, even after the split.

Councilman John Erickson was blunt in his assessment of LA Pride.

“I did not have a good experience at LA Pride last year, and I think that the work that they have to do to get back the trust in the community is up to them,” Erickson said.

West Hollywood City Council members will appear at both its own WeHo Pride and World Pride in Washington, D.C.

In addition to its parade on June 1, West Hollywood’s Pride will include the OUTLOUD Music Festival with headliners Lizzo, Lil Nas X and Paris Hilton. Additional events and updates can be found at wehopride.com. For information about LA Pride, visit lapride.org.

Wire thefts keep residents in the dark

■ Blackouts in residential neighborhoods raise crime concerns

BY EDWIN FOLVEN

Copper wire thefts from streetlights and electrical vaults in Los Angeles are frequently causing blackouts, sometimes plunging entire blocks into darkness. Thieves sell the wire to scrap metal recyclers, who pay $2-$3 per pound. But the cost of the thefts is astronomical to the city, which pays millions of dollars each year for repairs. The thefts also have a negative impact on residents in neighborhoods that go dark, sometimes waiting weeks for repairs. “It’s a public safety issue,” said Kari Garcia, who oversees the neighborhood watch program for the Miracle Mile Residents Association. “Some streets are pitch black. It’s happening more and more and it’s frustrating.” The Los Angeles Bureau of Street Lighting, which is responsible for maintaining and repairing streetlights throughout the city, is facing an uphill battle in addressing damage caused by thieves. A report provided by the bureau shows in fiscal year 23-24, 10,136 theft and vandalism incidents were recorded, accounting for 40% of all street lighting incidents requiring repairs. The thefts led to approximately 30,000 individual light outages city-wide during that period. “Theft and vandalism incidents are more costly and time intensive than other incidents. It takes a two-man crew an average of 30 minutes to replace a burnt-out or failing light fixture; by comparison, it takes an 18-person crew an average of eight days to fortify a 22-light circuit that has been damaged by copper wire theft,” the October 2024 report read. “These longer job times mean higher cost. The average direct cost to the bureau per theft and vandalism incident is more than four times the average of a non-vandalism issue.” Representatives of the Bureau of See Wire thefts page 26

Apartment fire may have been caused by electric scooter

A fire that erupted on April 13 caused significant damage to an apartment building at 5901 W. Gregory Ave., just east of Vine Street in Hollywood. The fire was reported shortly after 1:30 p.m. LAFD firefighters found flames and smoke in a ground-floor unit of the three-story apartment building, and determined the fire had extended into a wall. Forty-seven firefighters extinguished the flames in 28 minutes. Authorities found a rechargeable electric scooter in the unit, and believe it may have caused the blaze. LAFD hazardous materials specialists were deployed to dispose of the scooter’s lithium-ion battery. One resident of the building was assessed and treated at the scene but did not require hospitalization. The exact cause of the fire remains under investigation.

Case under review in fatal crash on Highland

BY EDWIN FOLVEN

Authorities are considering charges against a driver who police said was speeding on Highland Avenue in a Lamborghini SUV on March 31 and crashed into a Toyota RAV4 occupied by five teens, killing a 19-year-old girl and injuring the four others in the Toyota. Detective David Holmes, with the Los Angeles Police Department’s West Traffic Division, said on April 15 that the case has been presented to the Los Angeles County District Attorney’s Office and is under review. The Lamborghini’s driver and a female passenger abandoned the damaged SUV and fled on foot after the violent crash around 1:30 a.m. at the intersection of Highland Avenue and First Street. The female passenger later returned to the scene and cooperated with police. Holmes said investigators had a “good idea” who was behind the wheel of the Lamborghini, but he provided few details because a thorough investigation was necessary before the case was presented to the Los Angeles County District Attorney’s Office. The Lamborghini driver’s name has not been released pending an arrest on formal charges. The Los Angeles County Office of Medical Examiner identified the victim as 19-year-old Yobil Ann Cueto. A Go Fund Me account has been established for Cueto at gofundme.com/f/yobil-ann-coloma-cueto-memorial-fund. It had raised $3,970 as of April 16. “It is with heavy hearts that we announce the passing of Yobil Ann Coloma Cueto, a truly cherished member of our family and community. While we are focused on honoring Yobil’s memory, we are also grappling with the unexpected financial burden of funeral expenses. Our goal is to raise $5,000 to ensure Yobil Cueto receives a dignified send-off, for she has left our world too early at 19 years old,” read a statement on the Go Fund Me account. Anyone with information about the collision is encouraged to call West Traffic Division detectives at (213)473-0423.

Melrose swamp gets filled in

BY RANCE COLLINS

Work has begun on refilling the Melrose Triangle pit nearly two months after the West Hollywood City Council ordered the Charles Company to fill it with dirt.

For more than a decade, a largescale development had been planned for the site, which would have brought 225,000 square feet of office space and 80 residential units to the corner of Melrose Avenue, Santa Monica Boulevard and Almont Drive. It also included 526 subterranean parking spaces, which is why the lot had been excavated.

After a series of setbacks, which included a prison sentence on bribery charges for the Charles Company’s Arman Gabae, the project stalled. Currently, there are no known development plans for the Melrose Triangle. “The property is not for sale,” a Charles Company representative said in February.

It is also unclear how many tons of dirt will be required to fill the pit, and the Charles Company has not responded to further requests for comment.

The City Council made the directive to fill in the hole after the pit became what community members dubbed the “Melrose swamp” last year. In addition to the site’s physical appearance, flies and mosquitos were attracted to the pit and a putrid smell had radiated. As such, residents demanded action from the city.

“The Melrose Triangle project received its entitlements over 10 years ago,” Councilwoman Lauren Meister said. “All the city has to show for it is a giant hole. I hope the developer can come up with a good project that the community can support, and sooner rather than later.”

Vice Mayor John Heilman suggested that the project was part of a larger issue with development in West Hollywood.

“We have several large development projects which have stalled,”

Heilman said. “Leaving these properties vacant hurts our business community. These sites also become magnets for undesirable activity. We need to work with the property owners to get these sites re-entitled with proposed projects which can be built.”

Both Councilman Danny Hang and Mayor Chelsea Byers remained optimistic about the location’s future.

“I’m glad the site is finally being filled in,” Hang said. “It’s been an eyesore and a safety concern for way too long. The space has so much potential, and I’m hopeful to see it eventually transformed into a vibrant space that brings people together and supports local businesses.”

“The Melrose Triangle site presents incredible opportunity to build something of value to the city including housing and new retail opportunities,” Byers said. “I’m hopeful the property owners understand the city’s interest and are bringing plans together to meaningfully contribute to the future of the city.”

Getty’s PST ART concludes six months of thought-provoking exhibitions

PST ART: Art & Science Collide, the region-wide collaboration initiated by Getty, has concluded after presenting hundreds of exhibitions, programs and events throughout Southern California over the past six months. With the support of more than $20 million in grants from Getty and five years of research and planning, more than 70 cultural institutions, ranging from small community-based centers to the region’s largest museums, have participated in the unprecedented exploration of the intersections of art and science – past, present and in the imaginable future.

Nineteen of the exhibitions, including those at LACMA, the La Brea Tar Pits, The Wendt and the Fowler Museum at UCLA, are continuing after the official conclusion of PST ART and will remain on view through various dates in April 2026. A list of continuing exhibitions can be found at pst.art/en/exhibitions.

Art & Science Collide builds on the long history of exchange between art and science in Southern California, dating back to the earliest years at Caltech and the recognition that science flourishes when it is in dialogue with the arts and humanities. In the century since, the region has seen several scientific institutions, including the Natural History Museum and Jet Propulsion Laboratory, incorporate the arts into their programs. Both reflecting and expanding upon the history in the exhibitions, the latest edition of PST ART offered the public extraordinary new insights into topics ranging from the history of space exploration to sustainable agriculture, from ancient cosmologies to Indigenous sci-fi, and from biotechnology to environmental justice.

“Many of the art movements strongly identified with Southern California are unimaginable without an intense engagement with science,” said Katherine E. Fleming, president and CEO of the J. Paul Getty Trust. “Light and space artists collaborated with everyone from physicists to brain scientists to create a totally new art form, while digital and media artists have engaged the tech and entertainment industries in transformative ways. PST ART succeeded once again in bringing together Southern California’s distinctive, perpetually innovative art scene, this time in conjunction with one of the most important scientific communities in the world.”

Nature Challenge marks 10 years of community science

City Nature Challenge – one of the world’s largest community science events – returns for its 10th year of connecting people through local nature and their communities. Kicking off April 25 at 12:01 a.m., the challenge runs through April 28, at 11:59 p.m. From participating in organized biodiversity surveys to recording wildlife in neighborhoods, the City Nature Challenge encourages community scientists of all levels to explore their local environment – all while contributing to biodiversity science and conservation and using free mobile apps such as iNaturalist. Identification of photographed species will be crowdsourced through the online community from April 29-May 4 and results will be announced on May 5.

“We’re so honored to celebrate a decade of City Nature Challenge success. The tremendous growth we’ve seen year after year is a testimony to the concern and love for nature that is shared in communities all over the world. It is so inspiring to see that thousands of people enthusiastically share their observations of nature every year” said Dr. Lori Bettison-Varga, president and director of the Natural History Museums of Los Angeles County.

After launching the first City Nature Challenge in 2016 with 1,000 observers across a pair of California cities, NHMLAC and San Francisco’s California Academy of Sciences are hosting the 10th effort. In 2024, the Challenge broke numerous records, with more than 83,500 community scientists around the world amassing over 2.4 million observations from 690 cities in 51 countries. Since the inception, City Nature Challenge has collected over 7.13 million urban biodiversity observations of more than 94,000 species and engaged more than 364,000 people.

Wildlife can be found in participants’ homes, neighborhoods, backyards or anywhere else, and can be any wild plant, animal, fungi, slime mold or other evidence of life. Community scientists can take photos and/or sound recordings of their findings and upload them to iNaturalist or their city’s chosen platform and learn more about the plants and animals they find as their observations are identified.

The Ten Plagues: A Veterinarian's Perspective on Ecological Collapse

- Each Passover, we retell the story of the ten plagues – blood, frogs, lice, and more. But to me, they read like the unraveling of a fragile ecological world. Whether set in motion by divine design or triggered by natural events, the plagues didn’t strike at random – they unfolded step by step, a cascading public health disaster. Here’s my rundown – a vet’s perspective on the ten plagues:
- 1. Blood – It begins with the Nile turning red. A toxic algal bloom or upstream runoff from ancient Nubia? Either way, the river is poisoned. The match is lit.
 - 2. Frogs – Amphibians flee toxic water – a classic sign of ecosystem collapse. Their permeable skin makes them highly vulnerable. On land, exposed and displaced, they die en masse.
 - 3. Lice/Gnats – Rotting frog carcasses fuel insect blooms. Sanitation breaks down. Vector-borne disease surges.
 - 4. Wild Beasts – As the food chains collapse, predators and rabid wildlife move into human spaces. The boundary between wild and domestic disappears, increasing zoonotic spillover risk.
 - 5. Pestilence of Livestock – Wildlife-livestock contact spreads ancient diseases like Anthrax, Brucellosis, foot-and-mouth, TB, and rabies — all likely widely circulating in Exodus-era animal populations.
 - 6. Boils – Human illness spikes. Likely bacterial skin infections from bites, poor hygiene, or contaminated water. Anthrax or staph infections could explain the boil-like lesions. Vulnerability deepens.
 - 7. Hail – A sudden natural disaster. Maybe random — or perhaps the poisoned Nile destabilized the local climate. Crops are destroyed, animals injured, shelters lost.
 - 8. Locusts – These blooms erupt every 10–15 years, often after heavy rain — exactly the conditions hail creates. They blot out the sun, devour crops, and ensure famine.
 - 9. Darkness – Possibly a dust storm, volcanic ash, or the sky-thickening remnants of locust swarms. Circadian rhythms collapse. Agriculture halts. Darkness becomes despair.
 - 10. Death of the Firstborn – In pre-modern outbreaks, firstborns may have lacked maternal antibodies to novel disease. Later siblings might have gained passive immunity through gestation or nursing. Even today, firstborn infants are at higher risk for complications during birth, including longer labor, higher rates of dystocia, and increased likelihood of respiratory distress – factors that amplified vulnerability in ancient times.

So why were the Israelites spared? Even without direct divine intervention, differences in geography, animal care, and cultural practices may explain why the Israelites who were living geographically separated in Goshen escaped the worst.

Chag Sameach – wishing you a Passover filled with health, freedom, and renewal. Let’s remember: freedom thrives when we care for the world we share – human, animal, and beyond.

Greenacre Avenue’s historical status could be reassessed

■ WeHo Council to make determination for study

BY RANCE COLLINS

On April 14, the West Hollywood Historical Preservation Commission voted to recommend the City Council reassess the historical status of Greenacre Avenue, a cul-de-sac on the city’s east side which contains 36 1940s-era single family residences.

In 2022, another West Hollywood cul-de-sac on Betty Way was determined to be eligible for historical designation, but a concurrent study did not find Greenacre Avenue to qualify. The commission’s recommendation asks the City Council to approve a new study for the street.

A staff report noted an Architectural Resources Group survey, which found that “these properties have a common developmental history, and by virtue of their association with a single residential tract, exhibit shared attributes with respect to architectural massing, scale and setback, and all designed in the Minimal Traditional style.”

The report went on to say, however, there have been major alterations to many of the homes and properties, and the 2022 assessment found that “fewer than 60% [of the homes] would be considered [historical] contributors, which falls short of the threshold needed to retain sufficient integrity from its historical period and justify eligibility.”

Jon Weisbart, a 29-year resident of Greenacre Avenue, disagreed.

“Before the meeting, we had heard that only one of the 36 homes on our street retained enough integrity to qualify for historic district status,” Weisbart said. “Then at the actual meeting, the consultant said that 50% of our homes qualified but did not provide background information or the home addresses.”

But Weisbart argued that 80% of the homes qualify, and in its unanimous decision, the commission concurred.

“We are happy that the Historic Preservation Commission has voted to have Greenacre reassessed, but it really needs to be done by another consultant,” he said.

Resident Lynn Russell also argued in favor of historical designation.

“Greenacre Avenue currently preserves its sense of place as a window in time,” Russell said. “Of the 36 structures evaluated in this particular survey it must be noted that six have experienced some alteration of windows, doors and awnings all of which are reversible.”

Russell said that the street is seemingly the last remaining single-family development on West Hollywood’s east side.

“When doing a survey of likely historic structures, it is always easy to recognize the obvious gems. However, it takes a keen eye to recognize the context of one of our key elements of housing and development in West Hollywood – that being a subdivision contained on a single street.”

The West Hollywood Preservation Alliance applauded the commission’s recommendation.

“Community members pointed out and the commission agreed that Greenacre Avenue had not been given a fair shake with a perfunctory review having been conducted,” WHPA board member Victor Omelczenko said. “We believe that a reassessment of Greenacre with its homes built as West Hollywood’s only suburban-style subdivision in 1940-41 will support historic district status.”

The City Council will determine whether or not to conduct a new study for street at a future meeting.

“Preserving our city’s unique history is always important,” Councilman Danny Hang said. “I appreciate the commission taking a closer look at Greenacre and listening to the community’s input.”

Psychiatric hospital on Olympic moves closer to completion

■ Facility will offer comprehensive services

BY EDWIN FOLVEN

UCLA Health’s new Resnick Neuropsychiatric Hospital is entering its final stages of construction at the site of the former Olympic Medical Center on the southern edge of the Miracle Mile. Work has been ongoing since spring of 2023. Current interior and exterior construction is scheduled for completion next spring, with an anticipated opening in late summer 2026 following a licensing period, a UCLA Health spokesman said.

“Work is simultaneously under way on various project elements, including but not limited to interior construction and installation of equipment, operational workflow planning and staff training,” a statement from UCLA Health read. “A nearby medical office building acquired with the hospital from the previous owner is under renovation, with completion on track for fall 2026 and an opening in winter 2026.”

The building’s exterior is comprised of 280 made-to-order panels that were delivered fully assembled and precisely placed by crane on the building’s frame. The innovative construction method streamlined quality control and reduced waste, said Suzanne Kiely, project manager with UCLA Health planning, design and construction.

The new five-story hospital will have 119 beds and will provide comprehensive behavioral health care services for patients of all ages, including pediatric and elderly patients. A dedicated area for crisis stabilization services will also be included, according to UCLA Health. When complete, the Stewart and Lynda Resnick Neuropsychiatric Hospital at UCLA’s Westwood campus will move to the facility at 5900 Olympic Blvd.

The new hospital is located on the site of the former Olympia Medical Center, which operated from 2005-21. The property also housed Midway Hospital from 1948-2005. UCLA Health acquired the building in January 2021 following its closure by Alecto Healthcare. The acquisition also included a parking structure and medical office building on the north side of Olympic Boulevard that is being repurposed into the new behavioral health campus and will offer new clinic spaces for licensed behavioral health specialists.

Greg Goldin, president of the Miracle Mile Residents Association, said he has conflicting opinions about the new hospital. Goldin said many nearby residents are uncertain about the project because UCLA Health has not directly met with community members. However, he said there is a dire need for more neuropsychiatric services.

“I personally have no concern whatsoever that there is going to be a psychiatric hospital there. We desperately need such places in our country and our community. People need to be treated and resources need to be dedicated to that,” Goldin said. “As neighbors, we are disappointed that Olympic Medical Center closed. It was the closest emergency room, so that was a loss.

UCLA Health has not been very responsive to our concerns such as the impact on traffic, so that’s been a disappointment. But people need psychiatric help and I think it will be a good thing. Sometimes, it seems like the whole country needs its head examined.”

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

HEARING DATE: Monday, May 5, 2025
TIME: 2:30 PM, or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard
LOCATION: Commission Meeting Room 280A
Beverly Hills City Hall
455 North Rexford Drive
Beverly Hills, CA 90210

The Planning Commission of the City of Beverly Hills, at a SPECIAL meeting on Monday, May 5, 2025 will hold a public hearing beginning at 2:30 PM, or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard to consider:

DRAFT ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF BEVERLY HILLS AMENDING THE BEVERLY HILLS MUNICIPAL CODE TO ESTABLISH AN ALTERNATIVE MINISTERIAL APPROVAL HOUSING DEVELOPMENT OVERLAY ZONE FOR PROJECTS SUBJECT TO GOVERNMENT CODE SECTION 65589.5, AND ADOPTING AN ADDENDUM TO THE MITIGATED NEGATIVE DECLARATION PREPARED FOR THE 2021-2029 CITY OF BEVERLY HILLS HOUSING ELEMENT.

The Planning Commission will be discussing the potential establishment of a housing development overlay zone that would allow for a ministerial permit process for projects that are subject to Government Code Section 65589.5, generally referred to as “Builder’s Remedy” projects. Staff recommends that the Planning Commission adopt a resolution recommending the draft ordinance to the City Council for adoption.

Environmental Review

The zoning amendments were assessed in accordance with the authority and criteria contained in the CEQA, the State CEQA Guidelines, and the environmental regulations of the City. The Planning Commission recommends that the City Council find and determine that the ordinance is within the scope of and consistent with the Mitigated Negative Declaration (MND) for the Amendments to the Adopted 2021- 2029 City of Beverly Hills Housing Element (State Clearinghouse No. 2021090102), which was adopted by the City Council on March 18, 2024 and certified by the State Department of Housing and Community Development on May 1, 2024 and consider an addendum. Staff has determined that there are no substantial changes to the circumstances under which the proposed project will be undertaken that will require major revisions to the previous MND. Therefore, the previously adopted MND is adequate upon the preparation of an addendum.

Beverly Hills International Music Festival returns

BY TABOR BREWSTER

On April 24 and 25 at 7 p.m., the Beverly Hills International Music Festival will host concerts at Greystone Mansion and Gardens. Programming will highlight classical music with world-renowned performers and commemorate the Holocaust and Armenian Genocide.

The festival began in 2004 as a dual performance and educational event. Founded by Ukrainian conductor and violinist Gregory Cherninsky, the festival initially featured two-week master classes for young musicians and industry professionals from around the world. When the COVID-19 pandemic began in 2020, however, festival organizers were forced to cancel the event, and funding challenges have made it impossible to hold the event in the years since.

The festival's new director Veronica Bell is hoping to return the festival to its former glory, beginning this year with the concert series at Greystone Mansion.

The concert on April 24 will recognize the 80th anniversary of the Buchenwald concentration camp liberation, which took place in April 1945. The concert also falls on Armenian Genocide Remembrance Day. Bell said it was important to commemorate both events through the power of music – a statement of “resistance through art.”

"This is what artists do," Bell said. "This phrase that I've heard many times, 'shut up and sing,' or 'shut up and play,' it doesn't happen in the real world. Artists usually take a stand when they see the world turning the wrong direction ... The undercurrent of oppression is still going on, and as humans, I believe as artists, we need to make sure that nobody ever forgets what happened."

The April 24 concert will feature emotional and uplifting compositions by Nicola Piovani, John Williams and Armenian composers Arno Babajanian and Aram Khachaturian. The pieces will be performed by the Shell Piano Trio – consisting of a pianist, violinist and cellist.

"Our language is music, which is universal," pianist Shushana Hakobyan said. "We want to tell the truth and send our message to people, and talk to their hearts through the music."

Hakobyan believes strongly in the uniting power of music. Originally from Armenia, she has raised funds for displaced people in Artsakh and founded a group called Music For Unity to promote peace.

On April 25, the Sords-Walz-Durkovic Piano Trio will perform romantic compositions by Johannes Brahms, Antonín Dvořák and Sergei Rachmaninoff. Bell described it as an educational concert for attendees to learn about lesser-known faces – perhaps even scandalous stories – about the well-known composers.

“[Brahms, Dvořák and Rachmaninoff] had extramarital affairs. The compositions were to a large degree influenced by the turmoil in their personal lives,” Bell said. “We tell the story of composers and compositions and what’s happened behind the scenes.”

Tickets for the Beverly Hills International Music Festival are $55 and available at bhimf.com.

April hops in with beans, bunnies and old ballyards

Spring is made of spores and Wordsworth and jellybeans. At dusk, the scent of jasmine will knock you to the ground.

For these reasons, many men don't care much for spring, except for the baseball, played on little patches of meadow, straight out of a storybook.

So I suppose spring offers something for everyone.

Stopped by the village green the other day to find spring had sprung, as it always does in April, Maine to Mammoth.

This depresses me somewhat. I guess it goes back to my Viking ancestors, my warrior mother in particular, who preferred avalanches to April's tender sonnets. Winter triggered in Mom an adrenaline surge, a rush, a will to do battle. Plus, she really liked Christmas.

She liked spring a lot too, though, when the first red-breasted robins showed up beneath her beloved birch tree, as tulips pushed up through the frozen tundra.

"Oh, look, a robin!" she'd squeal after the dreary, 15-month Chicago winter.

I say bring on Easter and all its

by Chris
Erskine

glories. The bedroom window is back open, the ceiling fans are on again. I've traded my old slippers for flip-flops.

The other day, the commodore declared L.A.'s harbors finally free of ice.

Yep, L.A. is popping, as usual. There is hardly a time here when flowers aren't blooming, even in the harsh, hot autumns.

FYI, I live in a small, pastel suburb where they mow the fake grass and clip the plastic hedges, just to give it curb appeal and an extra bit of visual ooomf. Looks good on Zillow, I promise.

The trees, by tradition, are overly trimmed, chopped to their knees by massive crews constantly at war with wood.

Some insist this over pruning is good for the oaks and the cottonwoods. Oh sure. Over pruning trees is good for trees only in the sense that amputation is good for hurdlers.

That's another thing I like about spring: track meets.

Meets are the laziest, most-mellow sporting events I've ever encountered – a Woodstock, a spring ballet.

No one can make sense of a track meet; it seems a carousel of events all going at once. Between races, the athletes lounge in the grass, working on their freckles.

A spring track meet seems like something designed by Norman Rockwell, or grandmothers at high tea.

"And then the young man will fling his huge Frisbee as far as he possibly can..."

"What about costumes?"

"Beachwear mostly. Shorts and tank tops!"

To me, April is like October, full of color, a time of activity and transition.

The rabbits are on the run, you can barely walk the dog without tripping over three. The sparrows are a little drunk with love and the fermenting berries. Lust will do that to a person, I suppose – birds, bunnies, people, though I've rarely experienced it personally, not in a few days anyway.

Listen, I've read my Shakespeare and my Walt Whitman, so I'm fully informed about the wonders of this season.

"Happiness, not in another place but this place ... not for another hour, but this hour."

FYI, I'm one of those people who did very, very well on their SATs, then flunked out at life, becoming by necessity an itinerant scribbler. At my lowest point, I was actually a sportswriter of some merit, though that was mostly by my own estimation, no one else's.

Don't miss it much, to be honest. Except on April days such as these.

See, on April afternoons, I would hang out in the Dodger dugout watching batting practice, offering tips to the young men, which they eagerly ignored.

You think Einstein knew physics? You think Mozart understood violins? That is nothing compared to what the average major league hitter knows about the intricate geometry of his own swing – the closed shoulder, the twisting of his hands, which way his toes should curl on contact.

Anyway, April was always my favorite month at the old ballyard, when you still needed a sweater and before the beered-up summer crowds arrived. In April, you could get out of the parking lot in under an hour, which is probably what I liked best about it.

On April days like this, an MLB dugout is the purest form of Heaven. No team is out of it yet, no one's arm has turned to hamburger, and none of the journeymen hitters is doubting his eyesight, or his ability to get around on a fastball – not yet, at least. Not till May at the very soonest.

In April, everything is alive... careers, hopes, big-league dreams. The groundballs bounce truer, the sea breezes shove a routine high fly just over the right-field wall.

"Wow. Did you see that?"

Yep, April is pure candy.

Happy Easter. Blessed Passover. Wow.

‘The Funhouse’ brings cuts to corner on Wilshire

■ Whimsical barbershop pops up as a cut above

BY TABOR BREWSTER

A traveling barbershop in the heart of the Miracle Mile resembles a late 19th-century Barnum and Bailey big top. Every morning, Michael Elton Casey – who has been cutting hair for more than 20 years – unpacks a U-Haul trailer and sets up “The Funhouse Barber Shop.” Although he previously ran a shop on La Brea Avenue, the traveling funhouse will be his home base for the spring and summer, he said. “It’s kind of a blue-collar, pull-yourself-up-by-the-bootstraps mentality,” Casey said. “We don’t miss a beat. We make do with what we got and we work hard.” Just across the street from the La Brea Tar Pits, under a carnival-style pop-up tent on the corner of Wilshire Boulevard and Courtyard Place, visitors can step right up to find Casey, The Funhouse ring-leader, giving haircuts which his customers describe as the best in Los Angeles. The open-air salon is replete with eccentric curiosities – taxidermied animals, distinguished figurines and a vintage armoire filled with tools. Like a magician pulling a rabbit out of his hat, Casey reaches into each drawer, manifesting shears, clippers, combs and a duster brush to transform a customer’s hair. Casey – a screenwriter and a fan of the nearby museums – said he enjoys being an “artisan” for the surrounding Miracle Mile community, which includes actors, agents, music executives and creatives. He attributed his unique barbershop to his upbringing in Indianapolis. “Indianapolis is home to the Indianapolis Fairgrounds,” Casey said. “I grew up next to the fairgrounds. I was always at the carnival – at the funhouse. All of that funhouse atmosphere is reflected in my subconscious mind. When it came time to get a shop together, I put it together like a wacky funhouse. The Black man’s barber-shop, particularly, is as whimsical and fanciful as a funhouse.” Casey’s sense of whimsy is even reflected in his own dapper style. Donning a checkered shirt, plaid bow tie and suspenders, with a perfectly trimmed beard and dreadlocks fashioned into a neat bob hanging just above his eyebrows, his appearance is somewhere between P.T. Barnum and Rick James. In the past week, Casey said he’d given about 100 haircuts. Longtime customer Raymond Brothers traveled an hour and a half on a Tuesday afternoon to receive his usual haircut. As Brothers sat in the hydraulic pump barber chair, Casey clipped away while retro soul

Los Angeles Lakers head coach JJ Redick was joined by Steadfast LA chairman Rick Caruso and Los Angeles Mayor Karen Bass to announce plans to rebuild the Palisades Recreation Center.

Partnership helps Pali Rec Center rise from the ashes

Los Angeles Mayor Karen Bass, LA Strong Sports, Steadfast LA and Pacific Palisades community groups announced a public-private partnership on April 10 that will fund, redesign and rebuild the Palisades Recreation Center. The center, which was partially destroyed by the Palisades fire in January, is an important community hub for recreational activity for residents, organizers said. “The city’s No. 1 pledge has been to eliminate any and every obstacle in the way of rebuilding, and we are forging new partnerships with all sectors as we continue to move Los Angeles forward,” Bass said. “The Palisades Recreation Center, library and playground are each a vital piece of this community, which is why the city pushed for the Army Corps of Engineers to prioritize debris removal at these landmarks. We will continue this progress, and I thank everyone – LA Strong Sports, Steadfast LA and key Palisades groups – for coming together for this new effort.” LA Strong Sports was formed in late March by Los Angeles Lakers coach JJ Redick and his wife Chelsea, Charles and Jenna Jackson and Kylee Kilgore to build, sustain and grow top-tier sports and recreation programs in Los Angeles in the aftermath of the wildfires. “We visited the Pali Rec Center the same day we decided to move to the Palisades. That visit showed us not only how important the park was as a physical space, but how the people and families who took advantage of it made up the beating heart of the community,” Redick said. “We’re proud to formally announce a public-private partnership with the city and these local organizations to rebuild it so it can once again serve as a gathering place for sports and activities.” Led by developer and businessman Rick Caruso, Steadfast LA brings together the expertise, influence and power of the private sector to expedite rebuilding and minimize delays. Steadfast LA is developing solutions with leaders in real estate, finance, construction and infrastructure. The coalition includes representatives from Gensler, CBRE, Parsons, Esri and Latham & Watkins LLP. “This public-private partnership to rebuild the rec center with the city and in collaboration with civic leaders, local groups and industry experts demonstrates the vision of Steadfast LA in action,” said Caruso, chairman of Steadfast LA. “By bringing the public sector, the private sector and the community together to do this, we’re not only restoring an integral part of the Palisades, but we’re showing how we can effectively respond to this tragedy with the urgency that the moment demands. We intend to follow a similar approach on our projects in Altadena and Malibu as well.” The announcement follows news that the Los Angeles Parks Foundation has received a $1 million donation from FireAid to restore the Pacific Palisades Playground, located in the same park at 851 Alma Real Drive. - Development Agreement: The Applicant is requesting a development agreement with the City in conjunction with the proposal. The City Council will consider this request at a future date.

Project Description: The 9600 Wilshire Boulevard Specific Plan would facilitate the rehabilitation and adaptive reuse of the Saks Fifth Avenue Women’s Building, the retention of the existing commercial building at 9570 Wilshire for continued commercial use, and the development of new residential, retail, office, hospitality, social club, boutique hotel and open space uses throughout the Specific Plan Area.

The Specific Plan Area would be divided into two districts: a Wilshire Boulevard District fronting Wilshire Boulevard and a Neighborhood District to the south. The Specific Plan would permit a range of commercial and other compatible uses in the Wilshire Boulevard District, including retail, restaurant, boutique hotel, social club, office uses, and a limited number of residential units, with the potential to convert a portion of the buildings to additional residential units in the future. The Specific Plan would permit a more limited range of uses in the Neighborhood District, including multi-family residential and small shop/boutique retail uses, as well as publicly accessible open space. Consistent with the overall Specific Plan, the Applicant is proposing a Conceptual Plan that more specifically includes:

- Wilshire District:
 - Rehabilitation in accordance with the Secretary of Interior’s Standards for the Treatment of Historic Properties, and adaptive reuse of the Saks Women’s Building with Retail, Restaurant, Boutique Hotel, Spa, Social/Membership Club, and Apurtenant Uses (9600 Wilshire Boulevard); the construction of a new, approximately 97.8-foot tall (seven-story) attached building with Retail uses and 20 Residential units (9620 Wilshire Boulevard). These two buildings would cumulatively contain approximately 183,432 square feet (sf) of floor area;
 - The development of an approximately 84.5-foot tall (six-story), 69,999-sf building with retail and office uses (9588-9596 Wilshire Boulevard);
- Neighborhood District
 - The development of an approximately 76.75-foot tall (six-story), 120,280-sf, 28-unit multi-family residential building with small shop/boutique retail uses on the ground floor (128 South Bedford Drive);

- The development of an approximately 76-foot tall (six-story), 120,196-sf, 28-unit multi-family residential building with small shop/boutique retail uses on the ground floor (133 South Camden Drive);

- Site Wide
 - Four levels of subterranean parking beneath the Specific Plan Area, containing 744 parking spaces; and
 - The development of privately owned and maintained, yet publicly accessible, open spaces—specifically the ‘Terrace’ (located between South Peck and Camden Drives) and the ‘Via’ (located between South Bedford and Peck Drives).
 - Traffic calming/pedestrian improvements on South Peck Drive.

Construction of the Proposed Project is anticipated to commence in 2025 and would occur in nine phases, which would overlap in their duration. The overall duration of construction is estimated to be approximately 50 months (completion in 2029), including 14 months of utility relocation and 36 months of construction.

Final Environmental Impact Report (Final EIR): The Proposed Project has been assessed in accordance with the authority and criteria contained in the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), the State CEQA guidelines, and the environmental regulations of the City. The City of Beverly Hills has prepared a Final EIR to analyze potential environmental impacts associated with the Project. The Final EIR will be distributed on Thursday, April 24, 2025, for public review in conjunction with the Planning Commission Agenda Packet for the May 1, 2025, hearing. The Planning Commission will review and consider recommending certification of the Final EIR for the Project. The Final EIR analyzes the following potential environmental effects of the Project:

|---------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| • Air Quality | • Land Use / Planning |
| • Biological Resources | • Noise |
| • Cultural Resources | • Population / Housing |
| • Energy | • Transportation |
| • Geology/Soils | • Tribal Cultural Resources |
| • Greenhouse Gas Emissions | • Utilities / Service Systems |
| • Hazards & Hazardous Materials | |

The Final EIR also evaluated six alternatives to the Proposed Project. Based on the impact analyses in the Final EIR, the Proposed Project’s impacts to energy, land use / planning, population / housing, and utilities / service systems would be less than significant. With the implementation of the mitigation measures described in the Final EIR, the Proposed Project’s impacts to air quality, biological resources, cultural resources, geology/soils, greenhouse gas emissions, hazards & hazardous materials, transportation, and tribal cultural resources would also be less than significant. Noise and vibration impacts would be less than significant with implementation of mitigation measures, with the exception of construction noise impacts (i.e., construction beyond normally allowed construction hours) which would be potentially significant and unavoidable during construction only. The analyses completed in the Initial Study for the Proposed Project determined other CEQA topic areas would not have the potential to cause or otherwise result in significant environmental effects. Additionally, the project site is not on any list of hazardous water or disposal sites as enumerated in Government Code Section 65962.5.

Street work for subway project keeps lanes closed through June

Street-level work around the Metro subway project will continue through at least June at the Wilshire/Western, Wilshire/La Brea and Wilshire/Fairfax stations. Lane closures will be in place around the stations as crews continue repairs to street surfaces, curbs and sidewalks.

Wilshire Boulevard is intermittently reduced to one lane in each direction between Saint Andrews Place and Western Avenue, and Western Avenue is intermittently reduced to one lane in each direction between Sixth and Seventh streets. Wilshire Boulevard is also intermittently reduced to one lane in each direction between Highland and Cloverdale avenues in the Miracle Mile, and La Brea Avenue is intermittently reduced to one lane in each direction between Sixth and Eighth streets.

At Wilshire/Fairfax, Wilshire Boulevard is intermittently reduced to one lane in each direction between Spaulding Avenue and San Diego Way. Fairfax Avenue is intermittently reduced to one lane in each direction between Sixth and Eighth streets. The work will require a full closure of the Wilshire/Western, Wilshire/La Brea and Wilshire/Fairfax intersections on separate weekends in June.

Center lanes are closed on Wilshire Boulevard for street restoration near the Wilshire/Fairfax station.

At Wilshire/La Cienega, major demobilization work will continue through May in the Gale Staging Yard at the northwest corner of Wilshire Boulevard and Gale Drive. Daily work starts at 7 a.m. Sound mitigation measures will be in place when heavy equipment is in use.

Street restoration work and station construction also continue at Wilshire/La Cienega. Two lanes of traffic are open in each direction on Wilshire Boulevard between La Cienega and San Vicente boulevards.

Wilshire Boulevard has reopened near the Wilshire/Rodeo station in Beverly Hills. However, construction continues in the area, including potholing and piling activity. Eastbound and westbound Wilshire Boulevard is reduced to two lanes and curb lanes are restricted. Sidewalk access on Wilshire Boulevard from North Cañon Drive to Crescent Drive is also restricted during the work.

At the Century City /Constellation Station, construction has begun on an underground cross passage between the tunnels. Work is anticipated to continue for up to 20 more weeks from 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m. and 9 p.m.-6 a.m., Monday through Friday; and 9 p.m.-6 a.m., Friday through Monday.

Mayor appoints new leader for Personnel Department

Mayor Karen Bass announced on April 11 that she has selected Malaika Billups as the new general manager of the Department of Personnel.

Currently serving as the assistant city administrative officer, Billups brings decades of experience in the public and private sectors. She will provide the Personnel Department with strategic leadership to support the city workforce, implement strategies to reduce the city’s liability payments and improve hiring practices, Bass said.

Billups will lead the department following Grayce Liu’s service as interim general manager. Under Liu’s leadership, the department activated the Disaster Service Worker program to staff the Disaster Recovery Center in response to the Palisades fire, helped guide implementation of the city’s new HR/Payroll system and provided continuity in serving departments that depend on personnel.

The modernization of city hiring practices is paramount to efforts to change the status quo and deliver essential needs, Bass said. It currently takes months for someone to be hired by the city of Los Angeles. In that time, qualified individuals receive offers from neighboring cities, reducing the talent pool. The mayor said Billups’ appointment is an important step toward transforming, streamlining and modernizing the city’s hiring practices.

In her previous role as assistant city administrative officer, Billups supported the annual budget process and labor and employee relations, and developed financial management practices for city departments. Prior to joining the Office of the City Administrative Officer, Billups was the chief diversity, equity and inclusion officer for the Department of Personnel, overseeing the implementation of a comprehensive Workplace Equity Policy and developing the city’s Culture and Climate Survey. She began her career with the city as deputy city attorney in the Labor Relations Division.

Letters to the Editor

Hopeful new Beverly Hills mayor will ‘walk the walk’ with reproductive rights

Re “Nazarian outlines mayoral vision,” April 10 issue

As a resident of Beverly Hills, I was encouraged to read two of our new mayor’s initiatives: Mayor Sharona Nazarian’s commitment to protecting reproductive rights and her encouragement of public participation in government and community engagement.

Given the outcry from residents in Beverly Hills and from neighboring residents regarding the city’s actions against DuPont, a specialized reproductive health care clinic, I assume that Mayor Nazarian is not “talking the talk” but will “walk the walk.”

If committed to hearing from residents and committed to women’s rights, then the residents of Beverly Hills and the California voters can anticipate the following from her leadership: The city will drop the anti SLAPP motion in June against DuPont Clinic and the $400,000 for reimbursement of legal fees [and] the city will fairly resolve the suit with DuPont so the clinic can open and be welcomed to operate somewhere in Beverly Hills or Los Angeles.

It is refreshing to see any person and especially a representative to have the moral courage to take accountability and “right a wrong.”

I look forward to seeing these initiatives and actions enacted very soon under our new mayor’s direction.

Distracted driving can be life-threatening to pedestrians

Re “BHPD cautions drivers to avoid distractions,” April 10 issue

As someone who almost got hit by a car while walking through an intersection, I can vouch for the importance of this caution. There was no way the driver could say – if paying proper attention – he or she did not see me, as I waited for some time for the light to change, as did they.

When finally the “WALK” sign lit, I did so and the car opposite me proceeded into the intersection. Only they continued making their left turn and were now 15 feet away and heading right for me. Had I not quickly stopped and yelled out, I might not be writing this.

I have little doubt the car’s darkly tinted windows served their intended purpose of allowing the owner to fire off important texts like, “But I hate rhubarb,” without anyone noticing while at the same time making left turns in Los Angeles.

Farmhouse restaurant opening soon

Descanso Gardens, the botanical garden and living museum located in La Cañada Flintridge, is announcing the upcoming opening of Farmhouse at Descanso Gardens, a farm-to-table culinary experience developed in collaboration with renowned Chef Rich Mead. Opening in the spring of 2025, the innovative dining destination will celebrate California’s local farmers and seasonal ingredients, offering guests a unique culinary adventure nestled in Descanso Gardens’ sprawling 150-acre urban sanctuary.

“Rich Mead has earned a reputation for exceptional farm-to-table dining and redefining restaurant experiences within lush garden settings,” said Juliann Rooke, CEO of Descanso Gardens. “We’re thrilled to have partnered with him to bring that vision to life within our gardens, seamlessly blending locally sourced cuisine and craft cocktails with the botanically rich atmosphere of our Gardens. We can’t wait for our guests to enjoy it.”

Upon arrival, guests will step into a breathtaking 7,800-square-foot space that elegantly integrates the beauty of Descanso Gardens with an immersive dining experience. Anchored by a spacious main dining room, the restaurant will feature a mix of indoor and outdoor seating and a striking indoor-outdoor bar, crafted by local artisan William Stranger, made from fallen trees reclaimed from the gardens. Throughout the space handpainted murals, warm wood accents and vibrant greenery create a harmonious ambiance of raw materials and refined design, reflecting a historic organic aesthetic that effortlessly merges the restaurant with its breathtaking surroundings.

As they enter, guests will be drawn to an inviting lounge and bar space designed for both relaxation and lively gatherings. Thoughtfully curated plant installations by Descanso’s horticultural team will adorn the restaurant, changing throughout the year to ensure a dynamic and ever-evolving atmosphere. An open kitchen view offers a glimpse into the artistry behind each dish, reinforcing the restaurant’s commitment to transparency and culinary excellence.

The menu at Farmhouse at Descanso Gardens was developed in collaboration with Chef Mead, showcasing his acclaimed farm-to-table philosophy. It draws from his deep appreciation for sustainably focused farmers and purveyors and California’s rich food culture.

“The beauty of the gardens, the incomparable taste of local ingredients and our ever-changing seasons have deeply influenced my approach to food,” Mead said. “I’m excited to see this concept come to life, as it’s all about connecting the land, the flavors and the seasons in

KBEV sweeps state SkillsUSA Competition

Beverly Hills High School’s Broadcast Journalism program has once again demonstrated its dominance, sweeping the podium at the 2025 SkillsUSA California State Competition in video news production with gold, silver and bronze wins. Earning gold, the team of Perry Gilardian, Jason Maybaum, Nora Nikfarjam and Aaron Gabayan will go on to represent California at the SkillsUSA National Leadership and Skills Conference in June in Atlanta, Georgia.

The silver team included Zachary Hasson, Noam Albou, Chloe Emrani and Sophia Saidian, followed by the bronze team of Deborah Cohen, Gunnar Walmsley, Josh Albou and Saanvi Jha.

The clean sweep continues a remarkable nine-year winning streak for BHHS Broadcast Journalist students at SkillsUSA, further solidifying Beverly Hills High School’s reputation for producing top-tier student journalists. The program, led by longtime CTE teacher Romeo Carey, remains a cornerstone of hands-on media education at BHHS.

“Our students continue to raise the standard for excellence,” BHHS Principal Drew Stewart said. “I’m incredibly proud of the focus and professionalism they brought to this year’s competition.”

Beverly Hills students visited the Japan Aerospace Exploration Agency on an international trip.

BHHS and BVMS students explore STEM in Japan

Twenty exceptional students from Beverly Hills High School and Beverly Vista Middle School had the opportunity to travel to Japan for a dynamic 10-day international learning experience that combined science, technology, engineering and mathematics with rich cultural immersion.

The program, which ran from March 26-April 4, took students across Tokyo, Tsukuba and beyond, where they engaged in hands-on learning at world-renowned science and technology centers, explored historic landmarks and expanded their global awareness through direct cultural exchange.

Students toured cutting-edge robotics labs, visited the National Museum of Emerging Science and Innovation (Miraikan), and experienced the future of aerospace exploration at the Japan Aerospace Exploration Agency. At each stop, they engaged with scientists and engineers, observed real-time innovation and gained insight into global STEM career pathways.

Beyond the labs, students explored the heart of Japanese culture – from the bustling Shibuya Crossing and serene Senso-ji Temple in Tokyo to a high-speed bullet train ride to Kyoto. They participated in traditional arts such as sushi-making, walked the iconic Fushimi Inari Shrine path and deepened their understanding of Japanese history at the Edo-Tokyo Museum.

“This program is a powerful example of how BHUSD brings learning to life beyond the classroom,” BHUSD director of teaching and learning Dr. Mike Sherman said. “Our students not only expanded their STEM knowledge, but also developed the global perspective and cultural literacy essential for thriving in the world ahead.”

Beverly Hills High School premieres ‘Mary Poppins’

Beverly Hills High School’s Performing Arts Department brought the magic of “Mary Poppins” to life this spring in a dazzling, full-scale production that marked the school’s first staging of the beloved musical. The production united students from across the department, including theater, band, orchestra and technical crew, in a stunning showcase of collaboration, creativity and school pride.

Performances were held at the Saban Theatre, where audiences were treated to extraordinary vocals, choreography, scenic design, lighting and a live student-performed orchestral score. Every element of the production was powered by student talent, guided by the BHHS Performing Arts faculty.

“This production of “Mary Poppins” was not only technically and artistically impressive, it was deeply meaningful for our school community,” BHHS Principal Drew Stewart said. “It brought together so many students, on stage, behind the scenes and in the orchestra, and reminded us all what can be achieved through dedication, teamwork and the arts.”

Opening night was made especially memorable with the return of BHHS alumnus Robbie Sherman (class of 1986), son and nephew of the legendary Sherman Brothers, Robert B. Sherman and Richard M. Sherman. Both were also BHHS graduates and the original songwriters behind “Mary Poppins”. Robbie Sherman’s visit was a powerful moment of connection between BHHS history and the next generation of creators.

Children and teens can receive prizes in the photo contest, which showcases creativity.

Mount of Angels, a nonprofit dedicated to fostering creativity and artistic expression among young people, is holding the first L.A. Youth Photography Competition, which is open to all children and teens across Los Angeles.

The competition offers a unique opportunity for young photographers to showcase their talent, gain exposure and have their work displayed in a professional gallery. Entering the contest is free and submissions are open through June 1.

The competition invites young people to electronically submit original photographs. The theme is “Resilience – Post Fire Life in L.A.” However, young people are welcome to submit photos on other topics.

Selected submissions (based on available space) will be printed in large format, professionally framed and featured in a gallery exhibition where the public can vote on their favorite pieces. Winners will receive prizes, and all participants will be recognized for creativity and artistic vision.

“Photography is a powerful way for young artists to tell their stories and share how they see the world,” said Jesse Cohen, founder of Mount of Angels. “We want to create an inclusive platform where every child has the chance to express themselves without the traditional barriers to entry in the art world.”

For information and to enter the contest, visit mountofangels.com/photo-contest.

Beverly Hills High School announced that Daniel Salkin, a standout member of the class of 2025, will be attending the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign. Salkin will major in computer engineering at one of the nation’s top-ranked engineering programs.

Over the past four years, Salkin dove headfirst into nearly every facet of campus life – symphonic band, wrestling, advanced culinary arts, robotics and theater stage design – leaving his mark in every space he entered. He also served as president of MORTORQ, the school’s award-winning Robotics Team, where he guided peers through the Robotics Capstone class with innovation, determination and collaborative spirit.

From programming robots and designing theatrical sets to crafting gourmet dishes in advanced culinary arts, Salkin brought thoughtfulness, focus and heart to all he pursued, while balancing a rigorous AP course load.

“Daniel’s passion, balance and perseverance have been truly inspiring to witness,” BHHS Principal Drew Stewart said.

Pink’s debuts at L.A. Zoo

Pink’s Hot Dogs opened a new location at the Los Angeles Zoo on April 11. The partnership between the zoo and Pink’s brings the world-famous hot dogs to more than 1.5 million annual zoo visitors.

“The Los Angeles Zoo and Pink’s Hot Dogs are both deeply rooted in Los Angeles’ history and culture, and this partnership is one that I believe every Angeleno will enjoy,” Zoo Director and CEO Denise Verret said. “One of the greatest aspects of the zoo is that we are uniquely L.A., and there is no better place for one of L.A.’s legendary eateries that has been a staple in our community for more than 85 years.”

Pink’s Hot Dogs opened at La Brea and Melrose avenues in 1939. The stand offers a wide variety of hot dogs and hamburgers, many named after celebrities who have dined at the legendary establishment. Actress and Los Angeles Zoo supporter Betty White was a frequent customer, and Pink’s named a hot dog in her honor in 2010.

“Pink’s Hot Dogs does not open locations just anywhere. The L.A. Zoo is a treasured institution in the Los Angeles community, and the marriage of our two brands is a perfect fit,” Pink’s Hot Dogs owner Richard Pink said. “Pink’s has been a supporter and partner to the zoo for many years, and now we’ll be able to offer everyone who visits the zoo items from our one-of-a-kind menu that’s made us famous.”

Located adjacent to the zoo’s new Cape Vulture Plaza, Pink’s new location offers staple menu items and favorites such as the famous chili dog, the Guadalajara Dog and of course, the Betty White Dog.

The Los Angeles Zoo is located at 5333 Zoo Drive, in Griffith Park. For information, visit lazoo.org and pinkshollywood.com.

BHPD targets impaired drivers at checkpoint

The Beverly Hills Police Department held a DUI checkpoint from 8 p.m. on April 11 until 2 a.m. the following morning at North Santa Monica Boulevard and Crescent Drive.

A total of 1,630 vehicles passed through the checkpoint and 206 were screened. One driver was arrested for driving under the influence, and four drivers were cited for driving without a license.

The locations of DUI checkpoints are determined based on incidents of impaired driving-related crashes. Funding for the checkpoint was provided by a grant from the California Office of Traffic Safety through the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Court launches new web portal to make jury duty easier

The Los Angeles County Superior Court has unveiled a completely redesigned online jury duty portal, providing jurors with a more streamlined user-centric experience with the ability to register for jury duty on any device, locate courthouses and jury assembly rooms with tailored directions and know exactly what is expected of them along each phase of service.

“Jurors play a vital role in upholding a justice system that is fair, equitable and just,” Presiding Judge Sergio C. Tapia II said. “The court’s mission – to ensure equal access to justice by resolving cases fairly, efficiently and promptly – would not be possible without their invaluable service. Redesigning our portal to inform court users about the jury process has been a key priority. We hope the new, user-focused features will give jurors the support they need – whether on call or reporting to the courthouse.”

Using the redesigned My Jury Duty Portal, available at lacourt.org/jury, prospective jurors can register for jury duty on any computer or smartphone, check-in for service, make requests to be excused, and postpone or transfer service to a different courthouse with greater efficiency. Prospective jurors are also provided with reporting instructions, a checklist to prepare for service and the option to sign-up for text or email notifications or download reminders about their service to personal calendars.

If prospective jurors are asked to report to one of the court’s 28 courthouses that assemble jury panels, they can use the portal’s new features to map out the best route from their home to the courthouse, learn about nearby parking options and locate the jury assembly room inside the courthouse. The portal also provides a list of frequently asked questions with helpful answers that correspond with each stage of service.

“Jurors are a cornerstone of the justice system and out of gratitude for jurors’ time and service, the court has strived to create a more efficient experience for jurors by providing helpful tools they can utilize from the moment they receive their summons until their jury service is complete,” Executive Officer/Clerk of Court David W. Slayton said. “The portal’s new features are designed to give jurors all the information they need at their fingertips to know exactly what their responsibilities are during each phase of their jury service.”

For additional support, a new interactive chatbot provides court users with another resource that provides personalized answers to commonly asked questions. Integrated directly with the My Jury Duty Portal, the new chatbot can register court users for jury service, postpone or make requests to transfer service and provide additional answers, depending on the user’s preferences.

Jurors may also continue to register for jury duty by phone by calling (213)972-0970. To access the new online portal, visit lacourt.org/jury.

The Broad marks 10th anniversary with dramatic expansion

The Broad broke ground on a major expansion project on April 9 that will dramatically increase the number of works in the collection on view, offer dynamic new experiences and heighten the museum’s live programming.

Joined by museum and civic leaders, artists, community organizations and grand opening sponsor East West Bank, the event marked the beginning of a new chapter for the museum. The expanded space is scheduled to open in 2028 before the Olympic Games, and general admission will continue to be free.

The groundbreaking ceremony included Joanne Heyler, founding director and president of The Broad, and philanthropist Edythe L. Broad, co-founder of museum. It took place on the site of the expansion, adjacent to The Broad’s existing building at 221 S. Grand Ave. Los Angeles Mayor Karen Bass, L.A. County Supervisor Hilda L. Solis, 1st District, and L.A. City Councilwoman Ysabel Jurado, 14th District, joined Dominic Ng, chairman and CEO of East West Bank, and Elizabeth Diller of Diller Scofidio + Renfro, to mark the start of construction.

“This new building reinforces a core belief in access to art that has guided The Broad’s approach in our first decade, extends the vibrant experience visitors enjoy today, and introduces entirely new ways for people to engage with the collection,” Heyler said. “The design uses the visual language of the vault to create public space, a gesture which aligns with The Broad’s institutional ethos of changing how museums welcome the public.”

The project will significantly increase the number of works on view from the Broad collection of contemporary art and add fresh visitor experiences. Designed by Diller Scofidio + Renfro, the architects for the original building, the expansion opens a new perspective on the “veil and vault” concept DS+R introduced in 2015, with the building’s iconic white honeycomb “veil” enveloping the art storage “vault,” the sculptural grey core. The expansion symbolically pulls the vault out from the veil and opens it to the public.

“I consider these buildings to be siblings, not clones, with a shared DNA but expressing unique characteristics that enhance the visitor’s experience of the pair,” said Elizabeth Diller, architect of The Broad’s existing building and the expansion. “By turning the vault inside out, the expansion will present new ways for visitors to directly engage with the art in smaller, more focused galleries or through serendipitous encounters with art in storage while preserving the intuitive logic of the original museum.”

New outdoor courtyards will open and an innovative art storage gallery will invite visitors into areas traditionally kept out of view. The new building will increase gallery space by 70%. Construction begins as The Broad enters its 10th anniversary year and welcomes nearly one million visitors annually.

“It has been wonderful to see so many people enjoying art at The Broad,” Broad said. “It has succeeded beyond my and Eli’s wildest dreams. Expanding the museum reflects our belief in the importance of art as a resource for everyone and in the vision Eli and I shared for Los Angeles as a world art capital.”

The Broad collection, comprising more than 2,000 artworks from the 1950s to present day, includes works by influential artists such as Jean-Michel Basquiat, Jeff Koons, Barbara Kruger, Roy Lichtenstein, Takashi Murakami, Cindy Sherman, Kara

Walker and Andy Warhol. New gallery space will create an opportunity to show more of the museum’s holdings simultaneously, as well as acquisitions never previously displayed. An unprecedented experience of art storage will invite visitors to circulate among painting racks on the expansion’s second floor. The Broad’s signature live programming, which creates entry points to the collection and exhibitions, will have a dedicated space on the first floor of the new building. L.A. Intersections, which highlights under-recognized music and performance scenes unique to the city, will continue through the opening of the expansion.

ture. Highlights include exhibitions of Korean literature and picture books, as well as book signings with Korean American authors.

The Korean literature exhibit will feature works by recent Nobel Prize laureate Han Kang, as well as books by internationally acclaimed authors such as Bora Chung, Sang Young Park, Hwang Sok-yong and Cheon Myeong-kwan.

In collaboration with the Korean Picture Book Publishing Association, approximately 30 Korean picture books and original illustrations will be displayed. Picture book-themed merchandise will be given away on a first-come, first-served basis to early visitors.

A variety of cultural experiences are planned. Visitors can try on hanbok (Korean traditional clothing) at a free photo event, and experience Korean calligraphy by writing their names in Hangul (Korean letters). In partnership with the Korea Tourism Organization and the King Sejong Institute, special promotions will be offered highlighting Korean tourism and language programs. Complimentary souvenirs will be available.

Four Korean American authors will also host special book signing sessions from 11 a.m.-2 p.m. On April 26, Paula Yoo (author of “Rising from the Ashes”) and Rosa Kwon Easton (“White Mulberry”) will sign books, followed by Ann Suk Wang (“The House Before Falling into the Sea”) and Susie Yi (“A Sky of Paper Stars”) on April 27. The authors recently gained attention in the United States for books that explore Korean culture and history.

“This event is a valuable opportunity to showcase Korean literature at one of the most prominent book festivals in the U.S., and we hope it will help more people discover the richness of Korean literature and culture,” KCCLA Director Sangwon Jung said. “We will continue to actively promote Korean literary and cultural content and expand local interest moving forward.”

‘The Pitt’ revives the weekly event series

Remember how TV series like “Lost,” “Breaking Bad” and “The Office” coaxed folks to gather weekly for viewing parties? Then came the Netflix model: drop the entire season all at once. But the definition of a season thinning out, as if BBC’s micro episode counts, should be the norm for all.

It worked for a time, but the gaps between each season keep growing wider, and payoffs feel less satisfying. Medical drama “The Pitt” presents something new as it borrows from something old: a longer season on a streamer that releases each week without any delays or breaks for holidays.

This is thrilling event television that transforms Thursday into “Pitt” day. And hey, if you still prefer that all-at-once method of delivery, the 15-episode season just finished. It’s binge-worthy, yes, but letting each emotionally charged, visceral and raw episode fester until the next one is an incomparable experience.

Here’s the premise. The day shift prepares to start its 12-hour shift at Pittsburg Medical Trauma Center. It’s 7 a.m., and Dr. Robby (Noah Wyle) is about to kick off another likely busy day in the emergency department and meet new medical hopefuls, some more green than others. Interns Victoria (Shabana Azeez), Trinity (Isa Briones) and Dennis (Gerran Howell) all know enough on paper, but the day will push them in ways they could never prepare for. Another newcomer, resident Mel (Taylor Dearden, providing one of the best performances in the cast), must shadow senior resident Langdon (Patrick Ball).

These new faces are quickly sutured into the various moving parts of the pit, a common nickname for EDs. Plagiarizing the structure of “24,” each episode depicts one hour of the day shift. (Don’t spoil why there are 15 episodes despite a 12-hour shift.)

Unlike medical dramas on free-to-air networks, “The Pitt” need not hold back. Just out of patient earshot, medical practitioners curse. Patient nudity is a possibility. And some emergencies are incredibly violent, ranging from third-degree burns and bone dislocations to collapsed lungs and complications during labor.

This is not an easy viewing experience. Besides mature content, some episodes are emotionally draining. Dr. Robby often delivers news that snuffs out family members’ last sliver of hope. But don’t expect the series’ scoring to tell you how to feel. Gavin Brivik’s moody sounds rarely interrupt the silence. Frankly, the residual noise from heart monitors is more common.

Wyle’s performance is incredible. Following “E.R.,” he dabbled in cable TV (several TNT projects) but nothing as intense or charged as this. Wyle’s Dr. Robby is a brilliant medical mind and teacher, though breaking bad news and coping with the anniversary of a loss are all heading somewhere bad.

We meet several others along the way, including charge nurse Dana (Katherine LaNasa), senior resident Dr. Collins (Tracy Ifeachor), third-year Dr. Mohan (Supriya Ganesh) and second-year Dr. McKay (Fiona Dourif), who rocks incredible bedside manner and an ankle monitor for an unclear reason. Still more supporting characters appear from the ranks of surgeons, security, EMTs, nurses, social workers, patients and the occasional higher-up.

Think about all the medical dramas airing right now or recently. “Grey’s Anatomy,” “Chicago Med,” “The Good Doctor,” “Doctor Odyssey.” Rarely are these primetime offerings rooted in reality. They operate more like mysteries of the week. And they always drench each episode in personal drama and melodramatics that soften the medical side of the story.

“The Pitt” certainly concerns itself with the human equation but it operates more like “Mad Max: Fury Road.” We learn about everyone during a very stressful time with minimal breaks. This greatly differs from “E.R.,” which featured a much younger Wyle and two of the series’ bigwigs, exec John Wells and showrunner R. Scott Gemmill.

It also covers many timely events – vaccinations, addiction, drug use, abortion, shootings – but don’t expect any special episodes. Things move too quickly in the pit for grandstanding or preaching. But Dr. Robby lets slip the occasional truths on his way to the next patient’s bed.

“The Pitt” is all heart, all thrills, all business. The Max series ends on a high that other showmakers will hopefully learn from. If not, at least season 2 will arrive in January, depicting a shift during the Fourth of July. What could go wrong?

Hollywood Queer Festival accepting entries

The 10th annual Hollywood Queer Short Film Festival is now accepting early bird submissions. Submitted films should be 30 minutes or less, and must include queer content.

The festival will screen again this year on Oct. 4 and 5 at Founders Metropolitan Community Church in Hollywood. Selected Short Films will be presented in four programs reflecting our immense and diverse queer community.

Filmmakers can submit their live action or animated films online at filmfreeway.com. An experienced selection committee will then select the approximately forty films to be exhibited at the event.

“This year our festival is of particular importance, as it constitutes an act of resistance against the fascist government that wants to erase all things queer from the national consciousness,” said festival director Jim Hoffman. The festival theme this year, Hoffman added, is “Visibility is Resistance.”

“As was the case last year,” Hoffman said, “Film festival behemoth Outfest will be offering less than its usual extensive schedule. There has been no official word, but there’s no mention at the Outfest website of their traditional summer festival, nor any announcements of the Outfest Fusion QTBIPOC Film Festival, which emphasizes films by and about people of color. This means many films will get their only exposure to the Los Angeles market through our festival. We are aware that this puts our festival in a unique position. We take this responsibility very seriously.”

WeHo plants a tree for Earth Day

West Hollywood’s 2025 annual tree planting event is set for Saturday, April 19 at 9 a.m., adjacent to the Plummer Park Tennis Courts located at 7377 Santa Monica Blvd.

The city will replace a tree recently lost during the extreme windstorms experienced in January. The tree species selected for this year’s celebration is the weeping bottlebrush (Callistemon viminalis). Widely planted throughout Southern California, the tree species is native to Australia. The weeping bottlebrush is a rounded, evergreen tree with a maximum height of 20 feet. It has a low water use rating and features vibrant red, bottlebrush-like flowers that attract hummingbirds and other pollinators. The weeping bottlebrush tree thrives in sunny locations.

The event will start with a short “how-to” planting session, followed by a discussion on the benefits trees provide to the urban environment. Community members are encouraged to join.

Tax credits offer a lifeline to productions

larly since the pandemic and 2023 SAG-AFTRA and WGA strikes, many production companies have chosen to film in other states, and even other countries, taking advantage of lucrative tax incentives. Georgia, for instance, has no cap on tax incentives for film and television productions.

On April 11, prior to the Film LA report, Rep. Laura Friedman (D-Glendale) held a press conference with union leaders from across the entertainment industry, advocating for the California Legislature to pass the bill, which would increase the $330 million in tax incentives annually awarded to state productions to roughly $750 million. The legislation would also expand the definition of what programs qualify, including series averaging at least 20 minutes in length, animated movies and series, and some competition shows. Previously, shorter series like sitcoms and animated projects were not a part of tax credit consideration.

“The entertainment industry is the key to California’s economy,” Friedman said. “It creates over 600,000 jobs and is [vital] to Silicon Valley and the creativity that industry relies on. It creates $30 billion in economic impact annually ... and there’s a $100 billion tourism industry tied to our creative economy. So, our message today is that the entertainment industry is looking to all of the elected leaders, like myself, to work together to make Los Angeles the most filming-friendly location in the world. We are looking for Hollywood, to the studios and producers, to commit to bringing production back to Los Angeles.”

Friedman also said she is advocating for the creation of nationwide incentives at the federal level, in an attempt to keep American productions from moving out of the country.

“I will keep fighting for federal support, including common sense tax plans to keep the signature industry in America, not overseas, so that America can tell our stories of who we are to the world,” Friedman said. “This is not just about nostalgia for Hollywood. It’s about our families and it’s about rebuilding. We cannot outsource L.A.’s talent. You cannot green screen the iconic locations that California offers.”

The January wildfires have brought increased focus to declines in the Los Angeles film and TV industries, with hundreds of industry professionals displaced from their homes. The disaster prompted the creation of Stay in LA, a grassroots organization that aims to keep studios from basing productions in other cities.

“At the time, separate conversations were happening – one among writers and directors, and another among crew and commercial workers – about how deeply this would impact the production community,” Stay in LA founder Pamela Buzick Kim said. “Being part of both groups, I was able to bring us together. We became a grassroots coalition of people in and around the industry who saw what was coming and knew we had to act fast.”

Stay in LA took off on social media.

“Our work started with awareness – amplifying how urgent the situation really was. From there, we moved into action: organizing rallies, speaking at City Council, meeting with legislators, testifying in Sacramento, writing letters and connecting with community leaders across California. We’re focused on legislative impact, but also on showing the public how much this industry contributes to daily life in L.A.,” Buzick Kim said.

Part of Stay in LA’s objective is to bring exposure to the local impacts of the film and television industry.

“This industry is the community. For every $1 of production, $1.07 comes back in direct tax revenue – and $24 in broader economic impact. That goes to dry cleaners, restaurants, coffee shops, parking lots, local shops. Our kids go to school here. We pick up our dry cleaning here. We eat at mom-and-pop restaurants. And yes – we drink a lot of coffee. When production leaves L.A., the ripple effects hit everyone,” Buzick Kim said.

Rabayah Khan, an assistant location manager and member of Teamster Local 399, has worked on numerous large-scale productions.

“For the location department, our budgets are basically budgets that go directly to the community,” Khan said. “We go to neighborhoods. We knock on doors. We pay residents [and] people impacted by funding. We pay schools. We pay churches to use their properties for parking. We murders, the resentencing motion was made without proper knowledge of the case and it was a political stunt by Gascón.

Hearings on Menendez resentencing begin

“This resentencing statute gives certain entities awesome powers ... It gives us a chance to recognize when someone has been truly rehabilitated,” Balian said.

Balian went through the case in great detail, highlighting the brutality of the murders and the brothers’ subsequent effort to hide their culpability. He displayed graphic photographs from the crime scene without warning – to which the brothers’ attorney Mark Geragos objected.

“What is the relevance for today’s proceeding?” Geragos asked. “Clearly this is irrelevant.”

Geragos criticized the prosecutors’ presentation as “outrageous,” accusing the district attorney’s office of “relitigating” the case and traumatizing family members who were present in the courtroom – all of whom want to see the brothers be released.

“This is a show proceeding put on by a D.A., frankly, who was elected as a throwback to the ‘90s,” Geragos said, characterizing Hochman’s approach as similar to “tough-on-crime” prosecutors of the 1980s and ‘90s.

In his presentation, Geragos pointed out the brothers’ behavior in prison, with both taking on leadership roles in rehabilitation programs, engaging in community outreach initiatives and obtaining advanced degrees while incarcerated.

“One of the reasons they have garnered so much attention is the work they have done,” Geragos said.

However, the prosecution disagreed with Geragos’ assertion that they had been successfully rehabilitated. Echoing statements made by Hochman, Balian stated that the brothers had not owned up to their lies, and they had not demonstrated full “insight” into their actions.

“They haven’t changed,” Balian said. “They’re the same people they were back then.”

Although both sides characterized the other’s argument as “political,” Judge Michael Jesic rejected the notion that the situation was based on “political winds.” However, he ultimately ruled against Hochman, stating that “no new information” was presented by the D.A.’s office.

“I don’t believe there’s enough basis to withdraw the petition,” Jesic said.

Immediately following the ruling, Geragos and family members of Erik and Lyle Menendez held a press conference outside the courtroom, where they praised the judge’s decision as a win for the brothers.

“Today is a good day. Today’s ruling affirmed something that should never have been in question – the facts, fairness and the law still matter. The court made clear that this process isn’t about politics. It’s about truth, it’s about justice and it’s about giving people the chance to show who they are now, not just who they were in their worst moment,” said Anamaria Baralt, cousin of Erik and Lyle Menendez.

In a statement released on April 11, Hochman said his office is prepared to move forward with the resentencing hearings, thanked the prosecutors involved and reiterated his position.

“These murders were calculated, premeditated, cold-blooded killings,” Hochman said. “Our position remains clear – until the Menendez brothers finally come clean with all their lies of self-defense and suborning and attempting to suborn perjury, they are not rehabilitated and pose an unreasonable risk of danger to public safety.”

On Sunday, April 13 – two days after the hearing – José Menendez’ sister Terry Baralt collapsed in her hotel room and was hospitalized, according to the family.

In a statement, her family members blamed the district attorney’s office for her medical emergency, and demanded that the office be removed from the case.

“No physical pain has ever kept her from being there for her nephews,” the statement read. “But the display put on by the D.A.’s office pushed her past the brink.”

While the coming hearing will determine whether the brothers will receive a reduced prison sentence, Erik and Lyle Menendez also face another possible pathway to freedom. On Feb. 26, Gov. Gavin Newsom directed the California Board of Parole Hearings to conduct a risk assessment investigation for the brothers. The direction is in response to a request for clemency from the brothers’ attorneys, and is the first step in a possible pardon of the brothers.

Newsom said there is “no guarantee of outcome,” and noted that the investigation is a necessary step before he can make “any determination” on clemency.

The parole board will hold a hearing for each brother on June 13.

Easter services welcome residents of God is present, sustaining each one of us and offering renewal. We walk together in a tradition of ancient worship, surrounded by uplifting sacred music and prayers. This Easter, you’re welcome [at] All Saints’ to experience the constant, unchanging love of God, to be renewed in faith and to share in the joy of the resurrection.”

With the country embroiled in continued political divides, worldwide conflicts that have local repercussions and economic uncertainty, faith leaders see the holiday as an opportunity for their communities to come together in fellowship.

“The message of Easter is vital in this moment as people face anxiety, fear and uncertainty,” said Rev. Hannah Adair Bonner, senior pastor at Hollywood United Methodist Church. “It is why the church has been telling this story for over 2,000 years, because the need for the belief that life can triumph over death, and hope can triumph over despair is as fresh and necessary today as it has ever been.”

Hollywood United Methodist Church, located at 6817 Franklin Ave., will hold two Easter services on April 20 at 9 a.m. and 11 a.m.

“We also remember at Easter how important it is to believe women, because the message of the resurrection was first proclaimed by the women,” Adair Bonner said. “If you are looking for a reason to believe in the power of love and community, if you need your tank filled to have perseverance for the journey ahead, then we hope that you will join us Sunday morning.”

Cathedral Chapel of St. Vibiana, located at 923 S. La Brea Ave., will start its Easter celebration with a 7:30 p.m. Holy Thursday, April 17, service, marking the mass of the Lord’s Supper. Good Friday services will be held at 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. A vigil of Easter service will follow on April 19 at 7:30 p.m., and three Easter services will occur at 8 a.m., 10 a.m. and noon on April 20. Cathedral Chapel School, located at 755 S. Cochran Ave., will then hold an Easter egg hunt from 1-3 p.m., which will also include a bounce house, petting zoo and photo booth.

“This Easter is marked by a special Holy Year celebrating the Jubilee 2025,” Cathedral Chapel’s parish business manager Nancy G. Sheehan said. “Pope Francis proclaimed the theme of the Jubilee Year as ‘Pilgrims of Hope.’ In a world where there is so much burden from global conflicts and violence, this Jubilee year reminds us that Christ is life and a source of ‘hope that does not disappoint.’ Cathedral Chapel of St. Vibiana church has been a source of hope for the community for 97 years.”

Many other Easter services will be held in the area, including at St. Ambrose in West Hollywood at 10 a.m., noon and 5 p.m. The Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills will have 8 a.m., 10 a.m. and noon gatherings, and First Presbyterian Church of Hollywood will meet at 11 a.m.

Wire thefts cause community crime concerns

Street Lighting were not available for further comment, according to a spokesperson who provided the report. The city of Los Angeles has approximately 223,000 street lights. The city allocates approximately $43.5 million annually for streetlight maintenance and repairs. Repairs due to copper wire theft took an average of 15 weeks to complete in 23-24, according to the report.

“A single incidence of copper wire theft on one pole can take out an entire circuit of lights,” the report stated.

Los Angeles Police Department officials are attempting to address crime issues caused by blackouts and alleviate resident concerns. Extra patrols are deployed in areas where streetlights are out and officers are looking for people tampering with equipment.

“When it’s pitch black, it’s really another place out there. When there are backouts, we will place officers in the neighborhoods,” said Lt. Mark Ro, with the LAPD’s Wilshire Division. “As taxpayers, and I’m an L.A. city resident also, we all pay. When you think about the cost of repairs because people are stealing wire, it makes your blood boil.”

Ro said police have received reports about the people breaking into street lighting vaults in the ground and stealing wire, resulting in widespread outages. He said those thefts are being committed by more organized groups that have special tools to get into the vaults. The suspects often wear hard hats and safety vests and appear to be official. He cautioned people to call police if anything looks suspicious, such as contractors working on streetlights and vaults with no identification or signs on their vehicles.

Garcia said someone broke into multiple electrical vaults approximately a week ago near Cochran Avenue and Edgewood Place, causing streetlights to go dark in the area. She said residents are worried thieves are breaking into the vaults to purposely cause blackouts and commit burglaries.

“It’s kind of frightening,” she added. “I’ve been coordinating with our neighborhood watch block captains so everyone is aware. The LAPD is increasing their surveillance of the area.”

Residents in Hancock Park have also been impacted by streetlight copper wire thefts, and have reported them to the city. The Hancock Park Homeowners Association compiled a list of locations where streetlights are out and is requesting expedited repairs.

“Entire blocks have been out. It’s just insane. We’ll have a broken light, and when you look at neighbors’ Ring cameras you can see people going down the streets in the middle of the night stealing copper wire,” said Cindy Chvatal-Keane, president of the Hancock Park Homeowners Association.

“They’ve all been reported. We are waiting on a plan for when the lights will be fixed. It’s definitely a public safety issue.”

Los Angeles City Councilwoman Katy Yaroslavsky, 5th District, is working on plans to address the streetlight outages in her district and get them repaired faster.

“It’s something we are dealing with constantly,” Yaroslavsky’s spokesman Leo Daube said. “We are working on using discretionary finding for the streetlights to get them fixed.”

Garcia said Yaroslavsky’s office has been responsive to concerns about the outages in the Miracle Mile and has helped coordinate repairs. Garcia is personally taking steps to help alleviate the problem more quickly by documenting all streetlights that are out in the MMRA’s 60-block area and providing the list to the city.

“I put out a call to all our block captains to assess their areas. When it comes to a safety issue, I can’t turn away,” Garcia added.

Residents can report a power outage to the LADWP by calling (800)DIALDWP. To report a broken streetlight, call the city of L.A.’s service request line at 311, use the MyLA 311 App or visit the L.A. Bureau of Street Lighting’s website at lalights.lacity.org.

BHUSD appoints Cherniss as superintendent

Stern said she initially voted against approving Cherniss as superintendent because she wanted to conduct a more extensive search process.

“Appointing the superintendent is perhaps one of the biggest responsibilities I’ve had in my tenure,” Stern said. “Given the unprecedented and very recent changes we’ve experienced, it is prudent to be extra cautious and leave no stone unturned. I wanted to make sure I looked at everything provided to me and every source of information that was available to me and my colleagues.”

However, she added that she believes Cherniss is well-qualified to lead the school district, given his previous experience as a superintendent and knowledge of BHUSD.

“I have no question that he is well-prepared,” she said.

Cherniss previously served in BHUSD as a math teacher at Beverly Vista Middle School, Hawthorne School principal, BHUSD director of human resources and assistant superintendent of business services. Since leaving the district in 2012, Cherniss served as the chief business officer of the Los Angeles County Office of Education and superintendent for three districts: San Marino Unified School District, the Palos Verdes Peninsula Unified School district and the Placentia-Yorba Linda Unified School District.

In an interview, Cherniss highlighted his connection to Beverly Hills and expressed a commitment to preparing BHUSD students for careers of the future.

“When I was here, there was about 6,000 students, and now today, 15 years later, there’s 3,000 students,” Cherniss said. “My vision for the district is to utilize our resources as best we can to make this a very unique and innovative and forward-thinking school district. Because we have less kids, we have the resources to make it exceptional for every student. I want to focus on preparing kids for jobs that don’t exist yet ... Nowadays we have things coming in like AI and emerging technologies that are going to lead to future jobs that we don’t know what they are yet.”

In the meeting on April 15, several BHUSD community members – parents, students, teachers and former parents and teachers – expressed support for the appointment of Cherniss.

“I’m completely convinced, with this board, and with Dr. Cherniss, we’re going to be a powerhouse,” journalism teacher Romeo Carey said.

Additionally, two of Cherniss’ colleagues from PYLUSD spoke in favor of his appointment.

“Our loss is your gain,” PYLUSD Board Member Leandra Blades said. “[Cherniss] brought innovation to our district.”

Blades highlighted Cherniss’ achievements at PYLUSD, including the creation of the Orange County School of Computer Science – a technology-focused program for grades 6-8 – and the Universal Sports Institute – a program for student athletes grades 3-12 that pairs them with trainers and provides access to state-of-the-art athletic facilities.

Although the Universal Sports Institute has been celebrated as a groundbreaking achievement for the PYLUSD, concerns have been raised over the program’s cost. According to USI Director Taylor Holloway, the program resulted in a deficit of approximately $1.5 million this school year. As a result, the program – which currently serves about 100 students – has reduced its staff.

BHUSD parent Kimberly Lifschitz expressed concerns over Cherniss’ appointment in the board meeting.

“Is the board planning to facilitate similar wildly expensive projects here? From where in the district’s budget will we take that money? From whom?” Lifschitz asked. “The history of the incoming superintendent, taken together with the increasingly concerning conduct of several board members forms a pattern strikingly similar to one that has been playing out for years in school districts all across the country. I refuse to pretend red flags are party decorations instead of the warning signs that they are.”

Board Member Russell Stuart responded directly to Lifschitz.

“I just want you to wait and see, because magic is coming,” he said. “I know you don’t like how we did this, but trust me, we investigated everything thoroughly. We’re incredibly confident in our choice and I think the speakers here today can prove that.”

Cherniss was hesitant to say whether he believed BHUSD should implement programs similar to the OCSCS and USI.

“We’ll have to see,” he said. “I definitely think [in] every district there’s a space to innovate. With the increasing use of AI in every profession right now, I’m very interested to see how we can use that to help our district and our students. There’s also a real need here – that I’m hearing at least – of improving our athletics programs. Whether it looks like it did – things will likely look different here than in the past – but I do see a need to improve our athletics program [and] to look at our technology. Is there a way to enhance the technology we use here?”

Cherniss was placed on administrative leave by the PYLUSD Board of Education in December 2024, pending an internal review. While the Placentia-Yorba Linda board stated that it could not release further details due to confidentiality protocols, Cherniss said it was because “the board wanted to go into a different direction,” following a board election.

“This is very common now in public education. Boards come in and they want to go in a different direction,” he said.

In addition to Marcus, Stern and Stuart, Board Vice President Judith Manouchehri and Board Member Sigalie Sabag expressed confidence in Cherniss.

“Dr. Cherniss represents everything we’ve been working toward, as his leadership reflects our priorities of safety and security, modern facilities to support student programs, and academic excellence to provide our students with a strong educational foundation, and we are proud to welcome him back to BHUSD,” Manouchehri said.

“[Cherniss] is a leader who listens, leads with clarity and understands the high standards our community expects and deserves,” Sabag said. “I am confident that under his leadership we will be elevating all four of our schools to the heights of academic excellence and I am especially excited to work toward our shared vision, earning national blue ribbon status for each of our schools. The future is bright with Dr. Cherniss at the helm.”

Cherniss’ three-year contract will officially begin on June 1 and expire on June 30, 2028. Dr. Jason Hasty will remain acting superintendent until June 1, after which he will continue in his role overseeing the district’s business services department.

“I think Dr. Cherniss is one of the best choices the board could make, especially with his connection to the community but also his overall expertise and experience as a superintendent,” Hasty said. “At one point he taught one of my classes at USC, and I’ve called on him many times for advice ... He’s a well-respected colleague among our peers, and he’s a mentor to me.”

Cherniss’ appointment followed the resignation of previous superintendent Dr. Michael Bregy in February, following months of turmoil over allegations of racism, retaliation, censorship and lawsuits against the school district. Moving forward, Cherniss said he hopes to ensure transparency.

“The more you try to make decisions behind closed doors, the more people will not feel they understand what’s happening,” he said, proposing regular town-hall style meetings with constituents from each school.

“When there’s a void or a lack of trust, these controversies tend to gain more steam. It’s about building trust with the constituents, so when things come up you can talk to them.”

Overall, Cherniss said he wants to focus on ensuring academic accomplishment through teaching real-world skills, and hopes to bring the district to a level of unprecedented success.

“Beverly Hills is the greatest city on Earth, and it is my mission to transform BHUSD into the finest school system in the country,” he said.

Yaroslavsky seeks input on budget

Los Angeles City Councilwoman Katy Yaroslavsky, 5th District, is holding a series of community conversations on the city budget. The forums offer opportunities for city leaders to hear from the public and for constituents to help shape decisions.

Yaroslavsky, chair of the council’s Budget Committee, is working with the council and Mayor Karen Bass to close budget shortfalls and preserve services. A virtual session will be held on April 21 at 6 p.m., followed by an in-person meeting on April 23 at 6 p.m. at Pan Pacific Park, 7600 Beverly Blvd., and an in-person session on April 26 at 11 a.m. in Westwood.
