Beverly Hills High School principal plans departure

■ Drew Stewart reflects on tenure with BHUSD

BY TABOR BREWSTER

Beverly Hills High School Principal Drew Stewart announced his departure from the Beverly Hills Unified School District on May 2, after accepting a new position as a middle school principal in the Lawndale Elementary School District.

Stewart began at Beverly Hills High School as a history, government and economics teacher in fall 2017. After just one semester of teaching, in January 2018 he was

Planning commission removed from WeHo approval process

■ Reviews for housing projects under 100 units to be streamlined

BY RANCE COLLINS

After a lengthy discussion in which dozens of residents weighed in, the West Hollywood City Council passed an ordinance aiming to reform the housing approval and permitting process at its May 5 meeting. The item, initiated by Councilman John Erickson, is an attempt to encourage housing production as the city seeks to meet the housing benchmarks set by the California Legislature.

“The city of West Hollywood has always been at the forefront of being ahead of the curve in terms of policy. This item is no exception,” Erickson said. “The work that every city must do to tackle the housing crisis will be tantamount to our local, regional and statewide success. I’m thankful to my colleagues for adding to my item to improve it, and grateful to the community who came out to express their opinions. I’m glad we added back a community meeting to ensure that they know that the city is listening to them and that we want all of our housing in West Hollywood to meet our goal of building a city for everyone.”

The primary issue of those dissenting was that the ordinance removes the necessity for Planning Commission approval for residential projects with fewer than 100 units. The argument by those who supported the item is that these meetings logjam the system, allowing developments to stall. Oftentimes, because of state mandates, the meetings, too, were perfunctory.

The lone “no” vote in the City Council’s decision was Councilwoman Lauren Meister.

“The city’s organizational chart has the residents on top,” Meister said. “It sure didn’t feel like it Monday night.”

Meister also said that the state’s requirements for West Hollywood to produce nearly 4,000 new units by 2029 was unrealistic.

“To keep putting this on West Hollywood like we’re going to save

Hearing continued for Saks Fifth Avenue

■ 9600 Wilshire Blvd. project has supporters and opponents

BY TABOR BREWSTER

Following a May 1 public meeting that lasted nearly six and a half hours, the Beverly Hills Planning Commission voted to continue a hearing on the specific plan for the Saks Fifth Avenue project at 9600 Wilshire Blvd. to June 10.

The project encompasses two blocks of Wilshire Boulevard between Camden and Bedford drives. The mixed-use development includes the rehabilitation of the historic Saks Women’s building at 9600 Wilshire Blvd. and the construction of four new buildings. The project was submitted by Hudson’s Bay Company – the parents of Saks Fifth Avenue.

“For 157 years, Saks Fifth Avenue has been one of the premiere luxury retailers in the United States. For over half that time – nearly 90 years – we’ve called Beverly Hills home. These buildings are not just stores to us. They are our West Coast flagships,” said Douglas Adams,

'Hide and Hide'

Black Filipinx playwright and Kilroys List honoree Roger Q. Mason returns to Skylight Theatre Company with the world premiere of "Hide and Hide" running from Friday, May 9, through Sunday, June 29. The production is directed by Jessica Hanna and stars Amielynn Abellera and Ben Larson. Set in 1980 during a seedy period in Los Angeles, "Hide and Hide" is a critique of the American Dream. Previews run from May 9-13. See schedule for showtimes. Tickets are $20. 1816 1/2 N. Vermont Ave. skylighttheatre.org/hide-and-hide.

Culinary history

The Culinary Historians of Southern California presents "Fine Dining at the Bowling Alley: Midcentury Architecture, Design, Food and Entertainment" with historian and author Chris Nichols on Saturday, May 10, at 10:30 a.m., at the Los Angeles Central Library. During the 1950s, technological, social and design advancements allowed luxurious bowling centers to open across America. They featured amenities never before seen in bowling alleys such as free childcare, Las Vegas-style showrooms and fine dining restaurants. Nichols investigates their design and examines the menus, chefs and rooms where guests could enjoy fine dining at a bowling alley. The lecture is free and followed by a themed reception. 630 W. Chanticleer at BroadStage

Grammy Award-winning ensemble Chanticleer returns to BroadStage for a jubilant celebration of choral singing on Saturday, May 10, at 7:30 p.m. Chanticleer is known as "an orchestra of voices" for its wide-ranging repertoire and virtuosity. Founded in San Francisco in 1978 by singer and musicologist Louis Botto, Chanticleer has become one of the most prolific recording and touring ensembles in the world, selling more than 1 million recordings and performing thousands of live concerts. The group's repertoire is rooted in the Renaissance, and has continued to expand to include a wide range of classical, gospel, jazz and popular music. Tickets start at $55. 1310 11th St., Santa Monica. broadstage.org.

'Zootopia'

Film lovers won't want to miss the Hammer Museum's "Family Flicks: Zootopia" screening on Sunday, May 11, at 11 a.m. A plucky rabbit (Ginnifer Goodwin) earns a spot on the police force of a teeming animal metropolis just as the delicate social contract between predators and prey is threatened by a string of mysterious mammal abductions. Teaming up with a sly fox (Jason Bateman), she more than proves her mettle. Admission is free. 10899 Wilshire Blvd. (310)443-7000, hammer.ucla.edu.

Mother's Day at Theatricum

Will Geer Theatricum Botanicum is holding "MOMentum Place" in celebration of Mother's Day on Sunday, May 11. Each year, Theatricum Botanicum creates a fantastical world of aerial and circus performers, dancers and musicians in the rustic outdoor amphitheater. Enjoy an afternoon of performance delights that are child-friendly and full of surprises. For an extra treat, enjoy a Mother's Day brunch at noon in the Theatricum gardens before the 2 p.m. performance. Tickets are $45 for the performance; and an additional $40 for brunch. 1419 N. The Pilot Self-Certification Program has been approved for rebuilding projects in areas such as the Eaton fire zone.

Rebuilding process streamlined in areas impacted by wildfires

The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved a motion on May 6 introduced by Board Chair Kathryn Barger, 5th District, and Supervisor Lindsey Horvath, 3rd District, to implement a Pilot Self-Certification Program for residential rebuilding projects.

The program is a proactive move to accelerate recovery for communities devastated by the January wildfires. The program will streamline the permitting process by allowing licensed professionals to self-certify that residential plans meet building code requirements, significantly reducing approval timelines while maintaining safety and accountability.

"This pilot program is about empowering qualified professionals, cutting red tape and putting families on a faster track to recovery – without compromising safety," Barger said.

The motion responds to the massive scale of destruction caused by the Eaton and Palisades fires, which damaged or destroyed more than 16,000 structures. The newly approved program will apply to properties in unincorporated Los Angeles County communities impacted by the fires, enabling families to begin rebuilding homes more quickly and efficiently.

The Los Angeles County Department of Public Works will design and implement the pilot program immediately and report back to the board within 120 days on its effectiveness and viability as a permanent solution that could apply to all unincorporated areas in the county.

Black teachers file lawsuit against BHUSD

■ Instructors allege racism at Beverly Hills High School

BY Tabor Brewster

A lawsuit filed by two Black teachers alleges racism, discrimination, harassment and retaliation at Beverly Hills High School. Former fashion design teacher Bella Ivory and current basketball coach Jarvis Turner filed the lawsuit on April 25 against the Beverly Hills Unified School District.

"[The claims] involve the disparate treatment and unfair treatment of our clients, who are both African American," the plaintiffs' attorney Brad Gage said. "The Beverly Hills school district, we alleged, has a number of problems of racism within the school [district] toward teachers and students."

The lawsuit cites several alleged incidents in which Ivory and Turner were the victims of racism. According to the lawsuit, Turner received an email calling him the n-word and received phone calls from students who used racial epithets. Additionally, it alleges that parents used "derogatory racial stereotypes" toward Turner, and that the police were called on Turner when he was coaching the basketball team. When he reported the incidents to his supervisors, the district ignored his concerns, the lawsuit alleges.

The lawsuit states that Ivory similarly expressed concerns over alleged racism within the district, which were not properly addressed.

According to the complaint, Ivory was told to be "compliant with white counterparts" when she expressed concerns to an administrator. The lawsuit also alleges that Ivory and a group of Black students were victims of racism during a pro-Trump demonstration on campus on Nov. 5, 2024. She and Black students spoke at a school board meeting on Nov. 12, 2024, alleging that a pro-Trump mob of students marched through the halls, shouted racist language and attempted to enter her classroom, where seven members of the Black Student Union were present.

According to the complaint, the anti-Black racism and harassment intensified after Ivory spoke out about the Nov. 5 incident. It alleges that a BHHS student announced in a school classroom that "she wanted to stab Ivory in the chest," and the BHUSD took no action in response to the threat. Furthermore, Ivory was the subject of a retaliatory investigation and was later forced to resign, the lawsuit alleges.

The complaint also alleges both teachers received less pay and benefits than their non-Black colleagues in similar positions.

Additionally, it alleges that Black students have been the victims of racism, including being called the n-word on a "near-daily basis."

"Although we're representing the teachers in this lawsuit, we know that the students are having problems as well and they also want to pursue claims," Gage said. "So we expect more to come."

Gage said he hopes the lawsuit will bring about positive change in

WeHo introduces 'Text to Pay' for parking at city's meters

West Hollywood is introducing a "Text to Pay" option for parking meters throughout the city. Text to Pay allows for payment at parking meters by sending a text message from a mobile phone instead of using coins or a credit card in the meter itself.

Parking meters in West Hollywood have distinguishing features from nearby Beverly Hills and Los Angeles meters. Many meters in West Hollywood are painted in a bright teal color and all meters display "West Hollywood" in a digital readout.

The city's new Text to Pay option allows payment in a series of four steps. Each parking meter has Text to Pay details provided on an orange sticker. Start by sending the word "PAY" as a text message to the short code 77447.

Users will be prompted to enter the meter number where parking. Each West Hollywood parking meter has a unique meter code (a combination of letters and numbers) printed on its curb-facing side. Users will receive a text message containing a link to a secure payment portal. Users can click on the link and follow the instructions to enter license plate, desired parking duration and payment details. There is a 35-cent transaction fee. After payment, the system will provide a confirmation message.

The Text to Pay system will automatically send a text message when a parking session is 10 minutes from expiration and will offer a link for users to add paid parking time.

For information, visit weho.org/parking.

the district.

"We want to see equal pay for Black teachers and we want to see compensation for the harms that Bella has suffered by being constructively terminated and having to take a lower-paying job," Gage said.

"We want the public to be made aware of the situation at the high school where the management, the supervisors – all those folks in the school [district] – don't really seem to take discrimination seriously and they have disregarded the claims and made light of them."

He described the district as "an ostrich burying its head in the sand, hoping everything disappears."

BHUSD Communications Media Specialist Colby Gilardian said the district does not comment on ongoing litigation.

A 26-year-old man was arrested on May 1 after smashing a window on Olympic Boulevard, police said.

Man faces vandalism charge for smashing window in Beverly Hills

Beverly Hills Police Department officers arrested a man believed to be a transient who smashed the window of a real estate office on May 1 on the northeast corner of Olympic Boulevard and Bedford Drive.

BHPD Lt. Kevin Orth said the suspect smashed the window around 8:25 a.m. and fled the scene. Officers located the man nearby, and took him into custody. Orth identified the suspect as Kent Maddox, 26. He was booked for vandalism.

Maddox has been arrested twice during the past six months in Los Angeles, including in the Wilshire area last December and the San Fernando Valley in September. No further information was available about those cases.

Fountain Avenue hit-and-run injures man in WeHo

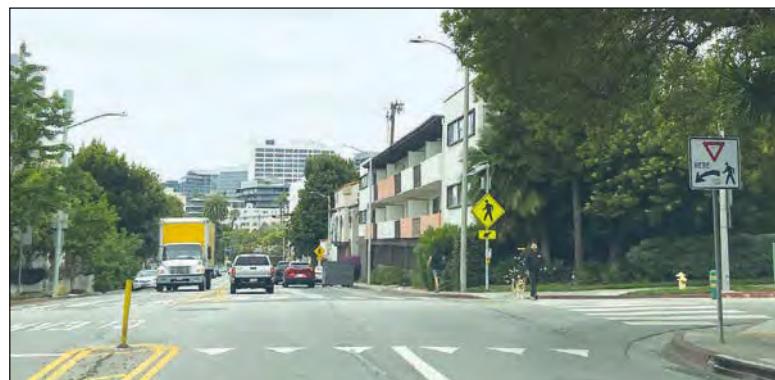

BY EDWIN FOLVEN

Authorities are searching for the driver of a vehicle that struck a pedestrian crossing Fountain Avenue in West Hollywood on May 5 and drove away.

The collision occurred at 11:52 p.m. at the intersection of Fountain Avenue and Havenhurst Drive. Paramedics took the pedestrian to a hospital in critical condition. Deputies determined a white sedan was traveling west on Fountain Avenue when it struck the man, who was in a marked crosswalk. The victim was not identified.

The vehicle continued westbound on Fountain Avenue without stopping. Authorities believe the sedan sustained damage to the driver's side front corner. Investigators said the vehicle was traveling at an excessive speed, which appears to be a factor in the collision. It is uncertain whether alcohol or drugs were involved, but it will be part of the investigation, authorities said.

Measures to reduce speeding and traffic collisions on Fountain Avenue have been under consideration by the West Hollywood City Council, including a redesign of the street with lane reductions and the addition of bike lanes. Plans are pending. The May 5 collision is likely to renew debate over Fountain Avenue.

A pedestrian was struck and critically injured on Fountain Avenue while walking in a marked crosswalk.

"It is deeply tragic that, as the city was pushing to prioritize changes to Fountain Avenue, we witnessed this horrific accident. In the last election, only Councilmember [Danny] Hang and I warned that failing to act would lead to more preventable accidents. Now, the need for immediate action is clear," Councilman John Erickson said. "We must move swiftly to implement safety improvements to ensure no one else is harmed. The time for talk is over. The time to act is now."

Anyone with information about the hit-and-run collision is urged to call traffic investigators with the West Hollywood Sheriff's Station at (310)358-4038 or (310)855-8850.

Call with antisemitic statements investigated as hate incident

The Beverly Hills Police Department is investigating a hate incident on April 26 in which a male suspect called a business in the 400 block of North Crescent Drive and made antisemitic remarks.

Lt. Kevin Orth said the caller made racially disparaging remarks but did not specifically target or name anyone. The person who received the call immediately reported it to the police department, which opened an investigation. Orth declined to provide the name of the business and said the investigation is ongoing.

"I can't speak to this specific incident but calls like this to workplaces are not unusual. It's very concerning," he added. "It was not specific to a particular person or individual. But it's better to report it. That way we can document it and look into who is making the call."

Beverly Hills Vice Mayor John Mirisch said the incident is unsettling and highlights the importance of taking steps to fight antisemitism and ensure the community is protected.

"It's one more incident of antisemitic Jewish racism that we are dealing with in our city and around the world right now, and it highlights why we need to take it seriously," Mirisch said. "Our goal is for Beverly Hills to be the safest city in the world, and that means being safe from antisemitic bullying."

Anyone with information or who receives a call in which someone makes a threat or uses racial epithets is urged to call the BHPD at (310) 550-4951.

State releases results of law enforcement grants

Last month, Gov. Gavin Newsom announced results from $267 million in grants to 55 communities to hire more police officers and secure more felony charges against suspects.

Proposed by the governor and distributed by the Board of State and Community Corrections, program participants also collected data on arrests, referrals, charges, convictions and sentencing related to organized retail crime. From October 2023 to December 2024, 88% of the 373 organized retail theft convictions were felonies.

The funding is split between two grant programs with unique applicants. The prevention program grantees compile arrest and referral data, while prosecution grant participants record charges, convictions and sentencing information. For information, visit gov.ca.gov.

A May 6 fire on Whitley Avenue was confined to one apartment.

Fire erupts in Hollywood unit with 'excessive storage'

The Los Angeles Fire Department extinguished a blaze on May 6 at an apartment building at 1732 N. Whitley Ave., just north of Hollywood Boulevard. Firefighters received a call shortly before 8:30 p.m. and arrived at the building to find flames in a single unit on the second floor. The apartment was filled with "excessive personal storage," which made extinguishing the blaze more challenging, LAFD spokesman Brian Humphrey said. The fire was fully extinguished in 17 minutes and was confined to the single unit of origin. No injuries were reported. The specific cause remains under investigation.

WeHo gifts donation for Project Angel Food renovation

BY RANCE COLLINS

The city of West Hollywood committed $400,000 at the May 5 City Council meeting to the renovation of Project Angel Food's kitchen, a show of support for an organization that has a long history with the city.

"We were born ... at the church at the corner of Fountain and Fairfax, and from the very beginning the city of West Hollywood has been a partner with us," Project Angel Food president and CEO Richard Ayoub told the City Council. "You were our very first government grant, and you continue to support us to this day."

In addition to launching in West Hollywood, Project Angel Food's support of those afflicted with HIV/AIDS kept the city and the nonprofit closely aligned during the worst days of the epidemic.

"Project Angel Food's mission is tied to the history of West Hollywood, the LGBTQ community and our ongoing fight that seems anew again with federal cuts to end the HIV/AIDS epidemic," Councilman John Erickson said. "This support has been something I have been pushing for since I was mayor for the city to make this significant capital investment, and I'm glad my colleagues agreed and we have a healthy budget as a city to make such an important investment in our regional future success by amplifying the work of Project Angel Food."

Over the decades, Project Angel Food has grown to help provide medically-tailored meals well beyond those suffering from HIV/AIDS, extending to people in need across Los Angeles County. Each day, the organization delivers 2,400 meals.

"The organization has since branched out and is providing those same services to a host of people living with chronic health conditions," Vice Mayor John Heilman said. "We are so lucky to have organizations like Project Angel Food in our community."

Project Angel Food has been working to expand its operations with the Chuck Lorre Family Foundation Campus, located at 960 Vine St. — just down the street from its current headquarters at 922 Vine St. The old building will be renovated to improve meal production and packing facilities. West Hollywood's gift is part of a $51.5 million investment toward the project.

"The city of West Hollywood's support for the renovation of its commercial kitchen will help our most vulnerable community members get the food and nutrition they need, which is something we can all be proud of," Councilman Danny Hang said.

"Project Angel Food provides nourishing meals to community members in need all across the region," Mayor Chelsea Byers said. "At a time when food resources are being cut and there is growing hunger due to increasing economic insecurity, West Hollywood's investment in this regional service provider will help scale their ability to serve and support countless lives."

Ayoub described just how large an impact the meal deliveries and volunteers have on clients.

"Many people in West Hollywood rely on us every day for medically-tailored meals. It helps them feel better. It helps their quality of life," Ayoub said. "And you can't underestimate the value of our home visits. Many times, we are the only visitor. One of our clients, Brenda, told a volunteer driver last week, 'You are the best part of my day.'"

Play at Greystone Mansion dissects antisemitism

The West Coast Jewish Theatre is partnering with the city of Beverly Hills to present a staged reading of "Lebensraum" by Israel Horovitz on Thursday, May 15, at 6:30 p.m. in the Greystone Theatre at the historic Greystone Mansion.

"Lebensraum" will be presented at Greystone Mansion on May 15.

The bold work is based on the fanciful, explosive idea that a German Chancellor might, as an act of redemption, invite 6 million Jews to Germany and promise them citizenship and jobs. A resulting scenario unfolds that explores the effects of the policy on Jews and gentiles, with widely varying outlooks: an out-of-work Jewish dock worker from Massachusetts who brings his Irish wife and his son to Bremerhaven to start a new life; a survivor of Auschwitz who returns to find the woman who betrayed his family to the Nazis; a young German smitten by a Jewish-American teenage girl; and an unemployed German laborer. The logical progression of the artfully drawn script raises the terrifying possibility that history may repeat itself.

Artistic director Howard Teichman leads the West Coast Jewish Theatre. The reading is part of an ongoing series by West Coast Jewish Theatre on antisemitism.

Tickets are $15 for Beverly Hills residents, $20 for non-residents.

Dodgers receive Make-A-Wish award

Make-A-Wish Greater Los Angeles celebrated World Wish Day at Dodger Stadium on April 29 by presenting the prestigious Chris Greicius Award to the Los Angeles Dodgers, a long-standing partner since the 1980s, honoring their commitment to granting wishes for children with critical illnesses.

The Chris Greicius Award is presented annually to celebrities, athletes and industry partners who have played a significant role in furthering the Make-A-Wish mission. Each honoree has made a lasting impact on the organization's ability to deliver life-changing wishes at moments when hope is needed most.

"Celebrating World Wish Day at Dodger Stadium and presenting the Chris Greicius Award alongside two of our wish kids, was a truly special moment," said Aparna Pande, president and CEO of Make-A-Wish Greater Los Angeles. "This award reflects the Dodgers' long-standing generosity and commitment to children in our own backyard. We're proud to honor this meaningful partnership and the hope it brings to children and families."

Your Pet Knows When It's 5:00... But Not Because They Understand Time

If you live with a dog or cat, you've probably seen it: that uncanny moment when your pet stares at you like clockwork right before dinner. You glance at your watch—yep, it's exactly 5:00. Every. Single. Day.

So how do they do it?

No, your pet doesn't understand time the way you do. They don't read clocks, wear watches, or count down minutes. But that doesn't mean they're guessing. In fact, animals experience time in ways we're only beginning to understand—and it's nothing short of fascinating.

⌚ Enter: Circadian Rhythms

Like humans, dogs and cats have internal biological clocks, known as circadian rhythms. These cycles regulate everything from sleep and hunger to hormone release and body temperature. They're influenced by light, behavior patterns, and environmental cues. If your dog eats at 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. every day, their body starts preparing for that event hours in advance—triggering hunger hormones, digestive readiness, and alert behavior. Your pet isn't waiting for a number on a screen. Their body knows it's almost mealtime.

💡 But It Gets Weirder: They May Smell Time

Recent research suggests dogs may actually be able to smell the passage of time. As humans leave for the day, the scent concentration in the house changes. By afternoon, it has dissipated to a level the dog has learned corresponds with your arrival. In a sense, your dog might not just know you're coming home—they may smell that it's almost time.

⌚ Routines, Sounds, and Your Subtle Cues

Pets are also master observers. They learn your schedule through subtle cues: the sound of your keys, the change in your voice, the pacing of your steps. You might think you're being spontaneous, but to your pet, your routine is more predictable than you realize. And if your cat comes running every day at 5:00, it might be because she's been watching how you shift in your chair around 4:58 for weeks.

⌚ They Don't Need a Clock—They Have You

So no, your pet doesn't "know" time like a person does. But they've developed an entire sensory and behavioral toolkit to anticipate the things that matter: food, play, walks, and you. Because to them, time isn't measured in hours. It's measured in moments with you.

Menendez case returns to court May 9

■ Hochman opposes attorneys' effort to recuse D.A.'s office

BY Tabor Brewster

A hearing on the potential resentencing of Erik and Lyle Menendez will continue on May 9 at the Van Nuys Courthouse. The hearing, originally scheduled for April 17, was delayed after a report from the governor's office on the potential parole of the brothers created confusion in the courtroom. Additionally, the brothers' attorney Mark Geragos filed a motion to recuse Los Angeles County District Attorney Nathan Hochman and his office from the case.

The brothers were sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole for the 1989 double murder of their parents, José and Kitty Menendez, in their Beverly Hills home. The ongoing resentencing will assess if the brothers have been rehabilitated.

The hearing on May 9 will determine whether the parole report is admissible in the resentencing and whether to remove the district attorney's office from the case.

In court, Geragos and defense attorney Bryan Freedman argued that Hochman should be removed from the case because of alleged mistreatment of victims. The district attorney's office displayed an image of the crime scene without warning while family members of the Menendez brothers were present, to which Geragos objected. Additionally, Freedman alleged that Hochman has a "personal bias," given his upbringing in Beverly Hills.

"Erik and Lyle Menendez are entitled to a fair resentencing process. José and Kitty Menendez's family members – regardless of what position they take as to resentencing – are all entitled to a fair sentencing process. The public is entitled to a process that appears fair," the recusal motion read.

Defense attorneys also argued that the family members have been denied victim services by the district attorney's office. Geragos highlighted the fact that Hochman hired Kathleen Cady – a former lawyer for the Menendez brothers' uncle Milton Andersen, the only relative who opposed their release – to lead the victim services department. Andersen died in March at 91 years old.

Hochman filed an opposition to the recusal motion on May 2.

"In the opposition, the district attorney's office has argued that in a 'drastic and desperate step,' the defense has decided to 'sidestep the central issue of resentencing' and present an argument 'devoid of merit' to recuse the entire district attorney's office," Hochman said. "The entire defense argument over recusal boils down to the defense not being happy with the current district attorney's position on resentencing. While this desperate argument may work in a press interview, it fails in a court of law based on an adversarial system of justice."

"Erik and Lyle Menendez are entitled to a fair resentencing process."

Mark Geragos,
Attorney

Hochman also reiterated the prosecution's argument – that the brothers have not been rehabilitated during their time in prison.

"Our position on resentencing is not yet, rather than never, as it depends on the Menendez brothers finally coming clean after 30 years with all the crimes, lies, deceipts and cover-up they engaged in and refuse to renounce," Hochman added. "From lying about their claims of self-defense to trying to get friends to lie about their father being a violent rapist of one of the brother's girlfriends or the mother trying to poison the family, these continuous lies demonstrate that the Menendez brothers have not shown full insight into their crimes, have not been rehabilitated and continue to constitute a risk of danger to society."

Separate from the resentencing hearings, the brothers will undergo a comprehensive risk assessment performed by the California Board of Parole Hearings on June 13. The assessment was ordered by Gov. Gavin Newsom, and marks the first step in a potential pardon.

Newsom said there is "no guarantee of outcome," and noted that the investigation is a necessary step before he can make "any determination" on clemency.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

DATE:

Thursday, May 22, 2025

TIME:

LOCATION:

1:30 PM, or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard

Meeting will be held in person at:

Commission Meeting Room 280A
Beverly Hills City Hall
455 North Rexford Drive
Beverly Hills, CA 90210

PROJECT ADDRESS:

Members of the public may also participate via teleconference; Details provided below

Citywide

The Planning Commission of the City of Beverly Hills, at a REGULAR meeting on May 22, 2025, will hold a public hearing beginning at 1:30 PM, or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard to consider:

A DRAFT ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF BEVERLY HILLS AMENDING THE BEVERLY HILLS MUNICIPAL CODE TO REPEAL RESIDENTIAL FRONT YARD SYNTHETIC TURF ALLOWANCES, ADOPT A 15-YEAR PHASE-OUT (AMORTIZATION) PERIOD FOR THE REMOVAL OF EXISTING PERMITTED FRONT YARD SYNTHETIC TURF INSTALLATIONS, AND FIND THE ORDINANCE EXEMPT FROM THE CALIFORNIA ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY ACT (CEQA)

The proposed amendments to the Beverly Hills Municipal Code (BHMC) would:

- 1. Prohibit new installations of synthetic turf in required residential front yards (including both single-family and multi-family residential zones), consistent with Senate Bill 676 (Allen, effective 2024), which restores local authority to regulate or ban synthetic turf; and
- 2. Require removal of existing permitted synthetic turf in required residential front yards within 15 years of the date this ordinance becomes effective.

Following the Planning Commission's review and recommendation, the draft ordinance will be considered for adoption by the City Council.

ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW

The draft ordinance was assessed for compliance with California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), the State CEQA Guidelines, and City environmental regulations, and has been determined to be exempt from CEQA per Section 15305 (Minor Alterations in Land Use Limitations). Additionally, the project is exempt under Section 15060(c)(2), because no direct or reasonably foreseeable indirect physical environmental changes are expected. As a result, staff recommends the Planning Commission find that the draft ordinance is exempt under these provisions from any further review under CEQA.

HOW TO PARTICIPATE

Members of the public can participate in, watch or listen to the commission meetings through the following methods:

In Person: Submit a speaker card to the Recording Secretary at the meeting.

Oral Comment: Call (310) 288-2288, select Option 1 when prompted. You will be placed on a brief hold, and called upon to make a comment at the appropriate time.

Video Comment: <https://beverlyhills-org.zoom.us/my/bevpublic>, enter passcode: 90210 when prompted.

Written Comment: Email commentPC@beverlyhills.org

Audio Only: Call (310) 288-2288, select Option 2 when prompted.

Watch LIVE: BHTV Channel 10 on Spectrum Cable or www.beverlyhills.org/watchlive

It is recommended that written public comments be submitted to the Planning Commission Recording Secretary by 11:30 AM on the meeting date. Public comments will also be taken during the meeting when the topic is being reviewed by the Planning Commission. Written comments should identify the Agenda Item number or topic in the subject line of the email.

In order to be read at the meeting, written comments will be allowed with a maximum of 350 words, which corresponds to approximately three (3) minutes of speaking time. If a comment is received after the agenda item is heard, it will not be a part of the record.

Any written comments received by end of the day on Tuesday, May 13, 2025 will be attached to the agenda report regarding this item. Any comments received after Tuesday, May 13, 2025, but prior the public hearing, will be distributed to the Commission under separate cover.

According to Government Code Section 65009, if you challenge the City's action in court, you may be limited to raising only those issues you or someone else raised at the public hearing described in this notice, or in written correspondence delivered to the City, either at or prior to the public hearing. Please note that any comments received prior to or during the public hearing will be considered as part of the public record.

If there are any questions regarding this notice, please contact Patrick Achis, Associate Planner, in the Planning Division at (310) 285-1129, or by email at pachis@beverlyhills.org. Copies of the project materials are on file in the Community Development Department, and can be reviewed by any interested person at 455 North Rexford Drive, Beverly Hills, CA 90210.

Patrick Achis,
Associate Planner

Pursuant to the Americans with Disabilities Act, the City of Beverly Hills will make reasonable efforts to accommodate persons with disabilities. If you require special assistance, please call (310) 285-2400 (voice) or (310) 285-6881 (TTY). Providing at least forty-eight (48) hours advance notice will help to ensure availability of services. City Hall, including the Council Chamber and Room 280A, is wheelchair accessible. The City Hall Council Chamber and Room 280A are also equipped with audio equipment for the hearing impaired.

Planning Commission updates builder's remedy guidelines

■ Draft ordinance awaits Beverly Hills City Council approval

BY Tabor Brewster

The Beverly Hills Planning Commission on May 5 approved a draft ordinance that streamlines the approval process for certain builder's remedy projects submitted in the city. The ordinance is aimed at encouraging developers to reduce the size and scale of such projects in exchange for an expedited permitting process.

The draft ordinance will now be reviewed by the City Council, which will vote on its formal adoption.

The builder's remedy is a state provision that allows private developers to bypass local code regulations when a project contains at least 20% affordable housing. The provision takes effect when a municipality's housing element – a state-mandated outline of zoning for affordable housing within the city – is out of compliance.

The goal of the builder's remedy is to incentivize the creation of affordable housing to address California's ongoing housing crisis. The builder's remedy falls under the state's Housing Accountability Act, which was passed in 1982 and significantly expanded in 2017.

The city of Beverly Hills' housing element for the 2021-29 cycle was out of compliance for approximately three years between 2021-24.

"The city is currently processing 14 builder's remedy projects, all of which have characteristics that generally far exceed the existing development standards and the type of development typically seen throughout the city," said Cindy Goden, principal planner for the city of Beverly Hills. "Because of this, the city is exploring options to encourage developers to voluntarily reduce the scale of their buildings and their projects in order to be more in line with existing development patterns."

The draft ordinance shifts the permitting process for builder's remedy projects that adhere to the guidelines from a discretionary process to a ministerial process. A ministerial process does not require city officials – including commissioners and City Council members – to review the project, while a discretionary process includes public hearings and actions taken by city officials.

For example, building permits for houses that comply with all standard zoning and building code requirements are ministerial, while development plan reviews and conditional use permits are discretionary.

Builder's remedy projects that adhere to the ministerial permitting guidelines will be exempt from the California Environmental Quality Act, and will not require public hearings or public notice. There is no right of appeal for projects approved through ministerial permitting.

To qualify for the ministerial permitting under the new ordinance, developers must adjust the builder's remedy projects to be 85 feet tall or less. The buildings also must adhere to the uses submitted in the projects' preliminary application, and the maximum density must be the number of units originally listed in the preliminary application.

In addition to other specifications including setbacks and parking adhering to the preliminary application, no barbecue or kitchen facilities may be installed or utilized on balconies of the projects. Outdoor common space is limited to the operating hours of 7 a.m.-10 p.m. on weekdays, 9 a.m.-10 p.m. on weekends and amplified sound must be prohibited in all outdoor areas.

"We are here because there is a collective hope that this ministerial process would provide an incentive for some of these developers who have builder's remedy applications currently in front of the city to reduce the scale of their project in exchange for a more streamlined approval process," Commission Chair Terri Kaplan said. "Some of them will likely say, 'no I don't want to reduce the scale of my project under any circumstances' Even in the discretionary process we do not have a lot of wiggle room. If we do nothing, and leave it as it is, these projects – many of them, some of them – will be massive. And we have no effective way to stop that. This holds promise to mitigate some of the overall impacts."

The draft ordinance was approved in a 3-0 vote.

Commissioner Myra Demeter and Vice Chair Jeff Wolfe recused themselves from the meeting, disclosing that they had "financial interests" in properties less than 500 feet from properties that may be affected by the draft ordinance.

Kaplan said that she and Commissioner Lou Milkowski also had similar financial interests. However, Kaplan and Milkowski attended the meeting after drawing straws with Demeter and Wolfe to determine attendance.

The city is currently engaged in at least one lawsuit over the denial of a 19-story builder's remedy project at 125-129 S. Linden Drive. The lawsuit, filed by the developers, seeks a court order mandating that the city approve the development. The next hearing is scheduled for May 15.

The draft ordinance aims to encourage developers to reduce the size of proposed builder's remedy projects, such as the planned development at 125-129 S. Linden Drive.

U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum holds annual Rubin Lecture

The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum presents the 14th annual Linda and Tony Rubin Lecture program, "Rescuing the Hidden Michalovce Collection," on Tuesday, May 13, at 7 p.m.

In 1942, members of the Schwarz family packed their belongings, hid them in the attic for safekeeping and left their home. Like many Jews who received deportation orders during the Holocaust, they hoped to return one day. But they never did. Those possessions – personal letters, photographs, Hebrew prayer books and clothing – stayed hidden, frozen in time, for nearly 80 years. Then, during renovations in September 2019, a new homeowner stumbled upon the time capsule still hidden in the attic in Michalovce, Eastern Slovakia.

Attendees will learn about the museum's work to unravel the mystery of the remarkable collection now in its care and discover what has been learned so far about the family who left it behind.

Speakers include Seth Gottlieb, collections curator at the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, and Beth Gottschling Huber, assistant curator at the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum.

Linda and Tony Rubin, dedicated supporters of the museum since 1994, will open the program with remarks. Their annual Rubin Lecture has consistently brought thought-provoking discussions on Holocaust history and education to audiences in the Western Region.

"Rescuing the Hidden Michalovce Collection" is free and open to the public, but advance registration is required. Interested individuals must register by Monday, May 12, to the Museum's Western Regional Office at (202) 817-4725 or email westerteam@ushmm.org.

The event will take place at the Wilshire Boulevard Temple, Resnick Family Campus, at 11960 Sunset Blvd. Entrance to the parking lot is on Saltair Avenue, with additional parking located nearby.

Elevator remains 'out of order' for West Knoll tenants

BY RANCE COLLINS

The elevator has been out of order at the four-story residential building 888 West Knoll Drive in West Hollywood since Feb. 9, creating issues for residents. Tenants have also complained about broken balconies, a problem they say has existed since last fall.

According to resident Debra Moore, it took several weeks to get an update on the status of the elevator's repair, and that update stated that it would "take several more weeks." On April 22, maintenance finally began on the elevator, though it is still ongoing and not operational.

Tenants took their concerns to the city of West Hollywood in a rent adjustment hearing with the Rent Stabilization Department at City Hall on April 28. During the meeting, the building's management company – Beverly Hills Properties, LCC – said that it would take 12 weeks to build the parts necessary for the elevator's repair.

Moore, a 70-year-old homecare nurse, said that she often has to carry work-related equipment, laundry and groceries up three flights to her apartment.

"Having elevators breakdown will most likely create hardships to older people, and for the population who are self-employed, having a working elevator is a necessity for their livelihoods," she said. "Why does it take two and a half months to manufacture parts before the repairs begin?"

Another resident, Aidin Ariaee, said that while the elevator always had occasional issues, including being very slow and sometimes getting stuck, it has never "been out of order for such an extended period."

"One of the main challenges has been the noise and disruption," Ariaee said. "My bedroom shares a wall with the stairwell, and since the elevator stopped working foot traffic on the stairs has increased dramatically at all hours. The stairwell is hollow and amplifies sound, and the stairwell door, located directly beneath my bedroom, slams loudly and often causes the entire room to shake. As a result, my sleep quality has declined significantly."

Ariaee also deals with sciatic pain, which has made the trek up and down the stairs particularly difficult.

The rear of the building also is in a state of disrepair, as several of the balconies and patios were demolished in August 2024 so that – according to Moore – they could be inspected for safety issues, but reconstruction has yet to be completed.

"The back of the building has become cluttered with leftover construction materials and garbage," Ariaee said. "This area is poorly lit and feels unsafe, especially at night."

He said that it felt like the "building starts a project and leaves it incomplete forever." He added that the rooftop area was dirty and messy, with broken chairs, and that the water in the pool had not been changed in a long time.

"They really don't care about the tidiness and functioning of the building," Ariaee said.

At the meeting, Beverly Hills Properties representative Tina South said that the company was "not in disagreement" with the residents.

"We understand that the contractor that started the [balcony] project, unfortunately, is having some issues with getting permits and everything started," she said. "They're promising us within the next couple weeks."

South added that the company had offered a rent reduction of $132 for affected tenants. She also said that they had asked the elevator company, Performance Elevator, in February for a timeline on repairs so they could inform residents about the process. She added that the company had believed an oil leak was to cause for the issues, and that it was shut down because of this safety concern.

Resident Claudia Silva said at the hearing that the residents "need a deadline" for the repairs – particularly for the elevator.

"It bothers everyone," she said.

Resident Axel Quinones said that he had an injury within days of the elevator breaking that required surgery.

"[I] had to go through my recovery without access to the elevator, which is taking a toll," he said. "I fell down the stairs a couple times. So, these are things that just add to something that seems like it could be fixable, especially considering that the building's had elevator problems since we moved in well over a decade ago. At times the permit [have] expired, and so all these different maintenance issues ... it's just unbelievable."

An agreement on additional rent reductions for tenants is ongoing, which could be around $500. Some residents have asked for a larger reduction, as much as half of normal rent, because of the ongoing problems.

Multiple "out of order" notices have been placed next to the elevator at 888 West Knoll Drive.

A decision regarding the rent adjustment hearing from the city of West Hollywood is expected May 28. Beverly Hills Properties did not respond to a request for comment by press time.

NATIONAL PASTE-UP DAY

"National Paste Up Day on May 7th each year remembers the time before desktop publishing and computerized digital imaging when many publications were completed by hand. The day also remembers those who worked so tediously in their positions."

Paste-up refers to a method of preparing and laying out pages of a publication. A paste-up artist was also known as a layout artist, mechanical artist, production artist or compositor. Part of the daily duties of the paste-up artist would be to cut the type into sections and arrange it carefully across multiple columns. They were also responsible for placing the headlines and other typographical elements. These elements were supplied separately.

They worked for newspapers, magazines, catalogs and other publishers. Paste-up artists used X-Acto knives and focused on precision. While a journalist may have written an article with detail and gusto, if the 327-word article didn't fit the column space, the paste-up artist would remove a line or two to make it fit. Ad space paid for salaries and photos often required cropping. Since the position required an eye for detail, paste-up artists were in high demand in the publishing arena, and they could face the high pressure of deadlines, too. Nevertheless, they kept their alleys straight and prepared their mechanicals on time for the presses.

Ahh, the good ole days ... any of you remember hot waxes, rollers and X-Acto knives? We do.

Vacant house razed after fire in Hollywood

■ Owner claims city process slowed progress

BY EDWIN FOLVEN

The city of Los Angeles demolished a vacant building in the 1700 block of North Wilton Place in Hollywood on May 1 that nearby residents said was a longstanding problem in the community.

The demolition occurred after a fire erupted in the house at 1744 Wilton Place shortly before 2 a.m. on May 1, causing significant damage to the structure. The blaze was the latest of approximately seven fires at the site since the start of April, residents said.

City officials claim they tried unsuccessfully over the past month to reach the owner, Lindon Shiao, to force him to comply with orders to secure the building and address issues. A hearing is scheduled at the next meeting of the Los Angeles Department of Building and Safety Commissioners on May 27 to determine what steps will be taken next with the property, including whether it will potentially be declared a public nuisance due to continual problems at the site.

A representative for Los Angeles City Councilman Hugo-Soto Martinez, 13th District, said on April 6 that the councilman's staff tried to contact Shiao multiple times, and finally reached him this week. Shiao has agreed to hire a private contractor to remove debris from the fire and building demolition. If he does not clear the site, the city will remove it and charge the owner.

Residents said the property at 1744 Wilton Place, and a second similar home next door at 1750 N. Wilton Place, have been vacant for weeks. The two buildings appear to be part of one property, but have different owners, according to the city. The owner of the building at 1750 N. Wilton Place is working with the city, has boarded the building and fenced the property, and has hired a security guard, Soto-Martinez's spokesman Nick Barnes-Batista said.

Soto-Martinez visited the site on May 4 and said he is prioritizing the efforts to ensure the property is safe.

"Neighbors shouldn't have to pay the price for negligent property owners, and we're looking into how the city can urgently step in to eliminate these types of public safety risks," Soto-Martinez said.

Shiao, who was reached by phone on May 7, said the city's claims that they could not reach him are false, adding that he has been in regular contact with an inspector from the Los Angeles Department of Building and Safety. He said he is ready to remove debris from the site but is waiting for approval by the Air Quality Management District. Shiao also said he would have demolished the site months ago but faced hurdles with the city of Los Angeles in securing permits.

"It's not me, as the property owner, who wants to hold this up. We are trying to do our part, we're trying to build affordable housing," Shiao said. "There are a lot of hurdles that impede the process of development in Los Angeles. Part of the issue is the bureaucratic process of getting permits."

Shiao also said homelessness in the area is rampant. He has tried to keep the site fenced, but unhoused people find ways to get onto the property.

"I understand the frustration of the neighbors. We've been doing everything we can to keep it fenced. Every time we erect a fence, it's breached an hour later."

Residents near the property said the city and the developer are not doing enough to address the issues. Multiple vacant properties are located in the 1700 block of Wilton Place, attracting unhoused people and causing a public safety risk. Resident Jennifer Martinez, who was captured on video on May 4 urging Soto-Martinez to do more to address problems in the neighborhood, said the problems with unhoused people on the stretch of Wilton Place date back to the COVID-19 pandemic.

"I was reiterating how the laws

Residents captured images of the May 1 fire that damaged the vacant house at 1744 Wilton Place, prompting the city to raze the building.

need to be fixed, just recognize that it is an issue," Martinez said.

"There's a lot of problems here. They should go back and review their whole permit processing and really enforce more laws on property owners, because they're pretty much doing whatever they can get away with."

Jeff Newton, a North Gramercy Place resident who lives just east of the vacant properties, said he is fed up with inaction. He said he is considering filing a lawsuit over the situation.

"[The owner] put up this fence, which says nothing. I mean, I could climb over that myself at age 67," Newton said. "The owner has stonewalled the city and actively interfered with efforts to secure it and get the squatters out. That's intentional, not simply benign neglect."

Wilton Place resident Carolina Blythe also said the larger problem is that it takes too long for the city to move projects through the permitting process, which results in properties staying vacant in neighborhoods for months.

"You can't be waiting on a permit since June of last year, because what happens is the minute something is abandoned, the squatters go in. And who can blame them? It's a roof over their head," Blythe said. "We're not the only ones dealing with this. They drag their feet. I don't know what's going on with the city, but when you've had repeated fires, how have you still not done anything? What is happening?"

Collier Douglas "Doug" Long said CHA Hollywood Presbyterian Medical Center will continue its longtime commitment to compassionate care.

CHA Hollywood Presbyterian Medical Center names new CEO

CHA Hollywood Presbyterian Medical Center, a member of CHA Health Systems, has announced the appointment of Collier Douglas "Doug" Long as its new chief executive officer. A seasoned health care executive, Long brings a proven record of operational excellence, strategic leadership and transformative growth across leading health care institutions.

"We are thrilled to welcome Doug Long to lead CHA Hollywood Presbyterian into its next chapter of growth and patient-centered care," said Paul Kim, CEO of CHA Health Systems. "His leadership history speaks volumes about his ability to drive operational improvements while maintaining focus on quality patient care aligns perfectly with our mission and vision for the future."

Most recently, Long served as president of Dameron Hospital, following his tenure as senior vice president of business development at Adventist Health, where he helped transition the organization to a shared services model, leading enterprise-wide business development, strategy implementation and major system integration efforts. He also oversaw the enterprise project management office, quality improvement initiatives, data and analytics and biomedical engineering across the network.

Before joining Adventist Health, Long spent several years with HCA Healthcare, including six years as president and CEO of West Hills Hospital and Medical Center. Long spearheaded major advancements in emergency services and quality of care, introduced a robotic surgery program and executed a five-year strategic plan that resulted in significant revenue growth. Earlier in his career, he held key leadership roles at Riverside Community Hospital, Sunrise Hospital and Sunrise Children's Hospital, delivering operational improvements and enhanced community-focused health care initiatives.

"I am honored to join CHA Hollywood Presbyterian Medical Center, an organization with a rich legacy and a strong commitment to compassionate care," Long said. "Together with the talented physicians, nurses and staff, I look forward to building on its commitment to providing high-quality care and strengthening our position as a leading provider of health care services in Los Angeles."

Long is also an active community leader and has served on boards for the Hospital Association of Southern California, United Hospital Association and Boys & Girls Clubs of America.

CHA Hollywood Presbyterian Medical Center is a nationally recognized acute care facility that has cared for people in Hollywood and the surrounding communities since 1924. CHA HPMC offers comprehensive health care services with a 434-bed acute care facility, including 89 skilled nursing beds. The hospital has a medical staff of more than 550 physicians and specialists, representing 69 specialties and 75 different countries. For information, visit hollywoodpresbyterian.com.

ONE receives $2.5 million endowment

Paul D. Lerner and Stephen Reis have made a transformative gift of $2.5 million to ONE Archives at the USC Libraries to name and endow the ONE Archives director position. That post has been held with distinction for many years by Dr. Joseph Hawkins, who has held leadership roles at ONE Archives since 2002.

"We feel that we are fortunate people who have benefited from the blood, sweat, and tears of early LGBTQ+ activists who opened up opportunities we enjoy today," Lerner and Reis said. "It's important for us to give back, and we hope our gift will inspire others to support ONE Archives so it can reach its full potential."

Lerner's ties with ONE Archives date to 1992, when he was completing a master's degree at the USC Annenberg School for Communication and was asked to give a talk at ONE about his research on LGBTQ+ media. He has been a supporter ever since.

Together as a couple since 2000, and married since 2014, Lerner and Reis have focused on supporting LGBTQ+ organizations with their philanthropy. Reflecting on their decision to invest in ONE, the couple said, "So often our history has been denied, forgotten or erased – but there are many fascinating historical records of LGBTQ+ people and communities in the archives just waiting to be discovered."

Lerner is widely known for his marketing communications and public relations work on health care issues, as well as his LGBTQ+ activism since the early 1980s. While a volunteer on the first communications committee supporting same-sex marriage rights, organized in 1995 by the Los Angeles LGBT Center, he coined the phrase "Freedom to Marry." The rallying cry echoed across the country over the next twenty years, until the Supreme Court's 2015 Obergefell v. Hodges decision legalized marriage for gay and lesbian couples nationwide. Lerner also won awards for his work in the 1990s with AIDS Project Los Angeles and Los Angeles Shanti. He later donated archival materials from the Freedom to Marry Coalition and Los Angeles Shanti to ONE.

"We hope our gift is the first of many major gifts to ONE Archives," said Reis.

Through its celebrated arts and cultural programs, ONE Archives engages artists, community members, educators, and the public and adds to the wealth of stories in its collections. The transformative gift by Lerner and Reis will extend the reach of LGBTQ+ history preserved at ONE through its support for the director position, which oversees curatorial, archival and general operations at ONE and serves as primary liaison with the USC Libraries and USC leadership.

Who really needs a mom?

I'm thumbing through my closet right now, trying to find a sweater without a soup stain, and I'm thinking: "Sure could use a mom right now."

A good mother refuses to put up with that. A good mother is the master of sarcasm, the maestro of shame. She would throw out all my stained sweaters and insist I wear a big bib perhaps, or slow down when I eat. My dear mom, long gone, was forever trying to get me to slow down when I eat.

OK, Ma. I hear you now.

That said, who really needs a mom?

Mine was a force of nature. She was built like a cat and walked like Genghis Kahn. I can still hear her clomping around the kitchen ... her long, oversized strides. She kettle-drummed to the basement, then thumped to the den to let out the dogs, shouting instructions like a quarterback.

Still, when the lilacs bloomed in spring, or the first snow fell each

by Chris
Erskine

November, no one was more excited by those quiet moments than my mom.

A good mother is a poet, naturalist, mechanic, moralist, humorist, pastor, baker, spy. A good mom can pull together a Halloween costume in 30 minutes, save a science project, untangle a kite string, blow up hundreds of birthday balloons.

Before there was Google, there were moms.

"Mom, was Rudyard Kipling a boy or a girl?" you'd ask.

"Hey Mom, how did Anne Boleyn die again?"

If she didn't know, she'd make it up.

"Anne Boleyn was hit by a Budweiser truck," she told me once.

All moms are different, but all moms are a little the same — their devotion, their faith in you, their quirky tastes in husbands. Like a thoroughbred racehorse, moms are all descended from one incredible mare crossed with a Turkoman stallion.

They're magic, most of them. Without moms, there would be no wandering minstrels, no Irish tenors, no Nobel laureates, no Chicago Bears. They are the source of everyone and everything that we cherish. If mothers ever unionized, we'd all be out of luck.

Honestly, there was nothing in my middle-class background to indicate I'd ever amount to much.

But I had a great mom. So I did OK, I managed. If she were still alive, she'd probably say: "Sweetie, maybe all your good days are still ahead of you?"

Thanks, Mom.

So ... who really needs a mom?

My daughters do. My late wife Posh was their anchor, their prime meridian.

They have produced — to date — two golden grandchildren with more on the way.

Sure, they listen to all the podcasts and study the latest blogs, but they still need their mom to tell them when to worry, how to handle a fever, what happens when "the baby swallowed so much sand you wouldn't believe it."

Modern pediatricians are wonderful, but they're not around at 3:47 a.m. when the baby won't stop hurling out her butt. That's what mothers are for.

Without a mom, my daughters mother each other. In a city the size of Europe, they live four doors apart. From Posh, they learned tenderness and devotion. It is Posh's priceless legacy, their best inheritance.

Yet, in the end: Does anyone really need a mom?

My son Smartacus certainly does. He lost his mom at 15, and I've tried to fill some of her roles. So, I can burn a pork chop, mangle an omelet, even iron his favorite shirt. But I could never hug him the way she could, never tousle his hair in a way that made him feel like a billion bucks.

Who really needs a mom? Well, they sure do.

See, only a real mom can both shame you and make you feel like a billion bucks in the same moment.

You know, A.I. will probably replace moms at some point. A.I. will aggregate all the good habits and behaviors of all the best moms in history into one program — one robot, one app — and children will never again miss a practice, flub a test, spill salsa all over the couch.

What happens then? Well, as a species, we will become far more efficient, soar to heights never before seen. But will we be happier?

Because, in the end, only a real mom can lift you when you're down. Only a real mom is the virtuoso of your entire life.

Happy Mother's Day.
Love ya, Mom.

We'll toast the moms on Saturday, at our Gin & Tonic Society bash in Hidden Hills. Space is limited. If you made the pre-May 2 cutoff and haven't received info, please email me at Letters@ChrisErskineLA.com Cheers!

Mother's Day Remembrance Service

Sunday, May 11, 2025 10:00AM

Join us for a meaningful and uplifting Remembrance Service as we honor the extraordinary women who have shaped our lives – our mothers. Whether they are present with us or in cherished memory, we come together this Mother's Day at Hillside Memorial Park to celebrate their love, wisdom, and enduring legacy.

This special morning will be filled with music, song, and prayer, offering a space for reflection, gratitude, and community support. We are honored to welcome Rabbi Cantor Alison Wissot of Temple Judea and Cantor Ilan Davidson of Temple Beth El, joined by composer Bob Remstein and musical accompaniment, to lead us in this beautiful service.

Understanding you are not alone, we welcome you to join us following the service to share your stories, memories, and support with one another, led by Maggi Scharf, M.Ed., CPCC, Certified Grief Educator.

Refreshments will be served. The park will be open from 8:00 AM to 5:00 PM, and a florist will be on-site.

Be a part of WeHo's largest drag story hour

■ City strives to set a new world record

BY RANCE COLLINS

In 2026, the city of West Hollywood will coordinate with Guinness World Records to produce the largest drag story hour event in history. The city aims to set the world attendance record as a show of solidarity with the LGBTQ+ community, which Mayor Chelsea Byers noted is “facing increasing threats.”

“We recognize the need to demonstrate support and engaging the community in a record-breaking drag story hour as a fun and memorable way to show that we are resolved in our embrace of free expression, joy and inclusion,” she added.

Vice Mayor John Heilman went further in calling out the Trump administration for its attacks on the community.

“We need to do everything we can to support our entire community whether they are drag performers, transgender activists or LGBTQI refugees and immigrants,” Heilman said. “Supporting and highlighting all members of our community sends a strong signal that we will fight efforts to strip us of our rights and freedoms.”

Drag story hours are readings for children by drag performers, which are currently held regularly at West Hollywood Library. The current record for the largest story hour was set in 2024 in Philadelphia, when 263 people attended a Pride-affiliated event held at the National Constitution Center.

Drag performances have been the subject of right-wing attacks in recent years, with numerous legislative items passed in southern states attempting to outright ban drag performances. Virtually all of these bans have been challenged in court.

West Hollywood has a long association with drag performance, and installed its first drag laureate, Pickle the Drag Queen, last year. Its second will be chosen in 2026.

No specifics or funding allotment have been set. City staff will return to the council at a later date for further direction.

“Drag artists and LGBTQ+ culture have become targets of right-wing attacks in the current political climate,” Councilman Danny Hang said. “The city of West Hollywood, by organizing the largest drag story hour in history, will send a clear message of resilience, pride and strength. In West Hollywood, we celebrate drag and we won’t stand idly by as marginalized people in our nation and our community are targeted with hate and intolerance. Our hard-fought rights are under threat by the actions of the current federal administration. We must embrace visibility, culture and expression in affirming spaces.”

Beverly Hills celebrates Arbor Day

The city of Beverly Hills held an Arbor Day celebration on Friday, April 25, at Roxbury Memorial Park. Mayor Sharona Nazarian, Urban Forest Bureau staff, CalFire representatives and the Beverly Hills community helped plant a coast live oak tree in the park.

The city of Beverly Hills has been a Tree City USA award recipient for 41 consecutive years. Significant factors in Beverly Hills’ ability to receive the prestigious award each year include an annual Arbor Day program, the Street Tree Master Plan, a well-managed tree care program and a commitment to responsible environmental efforts.

Street closures planned for upcoming subway work

Metro plans to close the intersections of Wilshire/Fairfax, Wilshire/La Brea and Wilshire/Western on different weekends in June as part of the D Line subway extension project.

Wilshire/Fairfax will be closed from June 13-16, Wilshire/Western will be closed from June 20-23 and Wilshire/La Brea will be closed from June 27-30. The closures run from Friday at 9 p.m. through Monday at 6 a.m. At Wilshire/Fairfax, Wilshire Boulevard will be closed from San Diego Way to Spaulding Avenue. At Wilshire/Western, the closure runs between Western Avenue and Saint Andrews Place. At Wilshire/La Brea, the closure will be located between Mansfield and Cloverdale avenues. Detour routes will be announced prior to the street closures.

Metro is also advising about the closure of the Wilshire/Western and Wilshire/Normandie stations from Saturday, May 17, at 9 p.m. through Friday, July 25, at 11 p.m. The closure is required to link the new subway project with the existing D Line. Bus Shuttle 855 and Metro Lines 720 and 20 will transport Metro D Line riders in the area during the closure.

Work on the subway project will also require daily lane closures at many locations along Wilshire Boulevard through June. Crews are rebuilding streets, curbs, sidewalks and medians along the thoroughfare.

At the Wilshire/La Cienega station, street restoration continues on the north side of Wilshire Boulevard and the east side of La Cienega Boulevard. Two lanes on Wilshire Boulevard are open in each direction between La Cienega and San Vicente boulevards.

From Monday, May 19, through Tuesday, May 27, northbound La Cienega Boulevard will be reduced to a single lane from approximately 200 feet south of the intersection to approximately 150 feet north of Wilshire Boulevard. Crews will install a new bus pad, which is an area with reinforced concrete to support frequent bus traffic, at the northeast corner of Wilshire/La Cienega.

Farther west, work is progressing at the Wilshire/Rodeo station. Construction is ongoing on road-

Metro welcomes older adults to transportation expo on May 9

Metro's "On the Move Riders Program" will hold the "Your Ticket to the World-Older Adult Transportation Expo" on Friday, May 9, from 9 a.m.-2:30 p.m. at the Pasadena Convention Center. The event will provide older adults ages 55 and over with hands-on workshops, panel discussions and on-site transit resources so they can confidently navigate public transportation.

"Millions of older adults in L.A. County rely on Metro to connect them to family, social activities and doctors' appointments," Metro CEO Stephanie Wiggins said. "Through our annual Older Adult Transportation Expo, we're giving our senior riders tools, tips and strategies to become power users of our system and to benefit from all the investments we've made in public transportation."

The expo will include a panel discussion with transit leaders from Foothill Transit, Big Blue Bus and Pasadena Transit, as well as two breakout sessions for more targeted instruction. The breakout sessions will help all levels of riders, from those who have never taken public transportation to frequent riders who want to learn more about Metro and destinations available via transit.

Pasadena Transit will provide a free shuttle to the expo from the Metro's A Line Memorial Park Station to the Pasadena Convention Center for attendees. The morning route runs from 8:30 a.m. from Raymond/Holly and stops in front of the Convention Center. The afternoon route runs from 2-3 p.m. from the Convention Center to Raymond/Holly and Green/Marengo.

Since the inception of the program in 2013, Metro's "On the Move Riders Program" has empowered older adults with the information and confidence to travel on fixed-route transportation. The annual event prepares more than 500 attendees to use the Metro system.

The program currently includes 58 dedicated volunteer Travel Buddies who lead 30 peer-to-peer travel training clubs. Each month, these Travel Buddies help older adults in their communities practice using public transportation, guiding them on trips to transit-accessible destinations. Along the way, participants gain confidence navigating the transit system, discovering new places and forming meaningful friendships.

The Pasadena Convention Center is located at 300 E. Green St. For information, call (213)922-2002, or visit OTMRPExpo2025.eventbrite.com.

Cal Fire offers tips for fire prevention

The California Fire Foundation, a nonprofit supporting active and fallen firefighters, their families and communities, is calling on all Californians to prepare for fire season and honor those who risk their lives on the front lines. May is Wildfire Preparedness Month.

To help residents and businesses, the Firefighters On Your Side campaign has been relaunched offering multilingual, community-based resources to help people create defensible space around homes, develop a five-minute evacuation plan, pre-pack emergency go-bags and download a complete wildfire preparedness checklist.

Residents are encouraged to create defensible space zones around homes and buildings. Keep areas clear of flammable items, use gravel or concrete, trim trees, clear dry brush, thin vegetation, remove dead plants and maintain clear separation between trees. Use fire-resistant roofing materials and keep roofs and gutters clear of debris, install ember-resistant vents and enclose eaves, use non-combustible materials for homes and seal all ember entry points and replace fire-prone landscape with fire-resistant materials.

For information, visit cafrefoundation.org and firefightersonyourside.org.

The California Fire Foundation offers resources on how to make homes more resistant to wildfires.

ways and in alleys near the future subway station. Eastbound and westbound Wilshire Boulevard is reduced to two lanes in the area and curb lanes are restricted.

Work is also progressing on the Century City/Constellation subway station. Crews are preparing to begin deck panel removal and street restoration along Constellation Boulevard between Century Park East and Solar Way. The work is anticipated to begin in June and last approximately two months. To facilitate the work, traffic control will be implemented in five phases from east to west. Following deck removal, traffic control measures will be reestablished on Constellation Boulevard to support continued construction.

City Nature Challenge documents local biodiversity

The results are in for the 10th annual City Nature Challenge, a community science initiative in which 102,945 people participated in 62 countries, documenting more than 3.3 million wildlife observations.

More than 73,765 species were observed, with the common dandelion as the most common nature observation around the world. In Los Angeles County, 1,514 people made 27,067 observations and documented 2,803 species, including 88 rare, endangered or threatened species. The western fence lizard retained the title of the most common nature observation in Los Angeles County.

The global event called on community scientists, nature and science fans and people of all ages to observe and submit pictures of wild plants, animals and fungi from April 25-28. Participants submitted photos using free mobile apps such as iNaturalist. The initiative shows the power of community science to track real-time changes in the planet's biodiversity.

"Never in my wildest dreams did I expect the City Nature Challenge to grow and become the largest annual biodiversity census in the world," said Lila Higgins, co-founder of the City Nature Challenge and senior manager of community science for the Natural History Museums of Los Angeles County. "It is amazing that over the course of 10 challenges, more than 364,000 community scientists have come together to gather more than 12 million observations around the world. This data is essential for the fight against biodiversity loss and to help us protect species."

After launching the City Nature Challenge in 2016 with 1,000 observers across a pair of California cities, the challenge – hosted by the Natural History Museums of Los Angeles County and San Francisco's California Academy of Sciences – broke numerous records in 2025. Since its inception, the City Nature Challenge has collected more than 12 million urban biodiversity observations of 110,000-plus species, and engaged more than 364,000 people.

"The City Nature Challenge happened at a particularly difficult time for many in Los Angeles County, with wildfires and government concerns leading to a general feeling of instability," said Amy Jaeger-Jones, NHMLAC's community science program manager and CNC global manager. "It would be understandable if these issues pushed nature to the periphery of life, but what we saw is that – even on a rainy weekend – thousands of people experienced the healing power of nature and did their part to reciprocate by contributing com-

Beverly Hills kicks off Jewish American Heritage Month with festive events

The city of Beverly Hills and its Community Services Department are celebrating Jewish American Heritage Month throughout May with a series of festive events. The kickoff took place on Sunday, May 4, at the Beverly Hills Farmers' Market, drawing hundreds of community members to an engaging morning of cultural activities and delicious competition.

The event featured a variety of activities, including a stop-motion animation and illustration workshop, a tzedakah-box making session hosted by the Skirball Cultural Center, lively performances by the klezmer band Mostly Kosher, a rugelach baking contest and an onsite gondi/matzo ball soup competition.

A distinguished panel of judges – Mayor Sharona Nazarian, Vice Mayor John Mirisch, Councilman Craig Corman and Councilwoman

Mary Wells – rated the entries to select the top winners. Nearly 20 contestants competed in the rugelach contest, while six participants cooked their gondi/matzo ball soup recipes onsite. Winners received $200, $100 and $50 in market money prizes.

In the gondi/matzo ball soup competition, Devorah Leah Illulian placed first, Matt Cowman placed second and Farah Kohan placed third.

In the rugelach contest, Elaine Maltzman placed first, Franne Goldberg placed second and Brooke Kahn placed third.

The event exemplified the rich cultural heritage and culinary traditions celebrated during Jewish American Heritage Month. Festivities throughout May in Beverly Hills include "Jewish Tales of Wonder, Wit and Wisdom" with Karen Golden on Thursday, May 15, at 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. in the Beverly Hills Public Library, 444 N. Rexford Drive; "Lebensraum," a staged reading presented by West Coast Jewish Theatre on Thursday, May 15, at 6:30 p.m. at Greystone Theatre at Greystone Mansion and Gardens, 905 Loma Vista Drive; and "The Jewish American Foodie: A Conversation" on Monday, May 19, at 6:30 p.m. in the Beverly Hills City Hall Municipal Gallery, 455 N. Rexford Drive.

In addition to the events, a series of films will be shown each Thursday in May at 1 p.m. at Roxbury Park Community Center, 471 S. Roxbury Drive. The films explore Jewish themes and cultures, offering a cinematic celebration of heritage.

BHHS senior to attend Columbia University

Beverly Hills High School announced that Karina Kruger, a standout member of the class of 2025, will be attending Columbia University. Karina will study public policy at one of the nation's most prestigious Ivy League institutions.

With a perfect GPA and 13 AP courses – including every advanced history class the school offers – Kruger set the bar for academic excellence. She helped lead the Academic Decathlon team to the state level, earned top medals across subjects and conducted award-winning science research focused on food preservation. She also worked to expand sustainability efforts through City Greens, BHHS's hydroponic gardening initiative.

Beyond campus, Kruger completed a Russian immersion program in Latvia, interned with the Beverly Hills City Manager's Office under Nancy Hunt-Coffey and tutored elementary students in reading, showing a remarkable dedication to public service and global awareness.

"Karina is an exceptional scholar and community leader," BHHS Principal Drew Stewart said. "She approaches everything she does with purpose and passion, and we have no doubt she will thrive at Columbia and beyond."

Sanderson takes helm as AJU's interim president

American Jewish University has announced the appointment of Jay Sanderson as the interim president of the university.

Sanderson, a visionary leader, innovator and lifelong advocate for Jewish life, brings a bold future-oriented approach to the new role. He will continue to build upon AJU's unique strengths of scholarship, innovation and a commitment to community to deepen the university's impact. Sanderson formerly served as president and CEO of the Jewish Federation of Greater Los Angeles.

"American Jewish University is positioned on the vanguard of the next chapter of Jewish education and leadership," Sanderson said. "In heading this unique institution we will push forward the mission of igniting curiosity, fostering creativity and empowering the next generation to shape Jewish life with courage, meaning and conviction."

Sanderson succeeds Dr. Jeffrey Herbst, who is stepping down after seven years of service. Under Herbst's leadership, AJU launched new programs, restructured schools and made strategic changes to secure a sustainable and thriving future. Herbst will remain connected to the university as president emeritus.

"Jay Sanderson is a fearless thinker and an inspiring leader whose career has been marked by bold action, creative disruption and a deep passion for Jewish continuity," said Harold Masor, chair of AJU's Board of Directors. "At a time of significant challenge and opportunity for Jewish institutions, Jay's appointment as interim president of AJU signals the university's commitment to constantly reimagining and investing in Jewish education and engagement for generations to come."

During his tenure from 2010-22 at the Jewish Federation of Greater Los Angeles, Sanderson led innovative initiatives in community security, social services and Jewish engagement. An award-winning media producer known for work on PBS's "The Jewish Americans," "Worse Than War" and the James Beard Award-nominated "New Jewish Cuisine," he has hosted popular platforms such as "The Jay Sanderson Show" and the podcast "Jay's Four Questions." Sanderson has also been named to the Forward 50 and has received awards from the American Jewish Committee, Israel Film Festival and city of Los Angeles.

most selective and celebrated programs in the country, with an acceptance rate of under 1%.

Prisand has spent her entire K-12 journey in BHUSD, beginning at Beverly Vista Middle School and continuing through Beverly Hills High School, where she became a standout in the performing arts. On the BHHS stage, she brought unforgettable energy to productions such as "Mean Girls," "The Diary of Anne Frank" and "Mary Poppins." She also played key roles in dance production advanced, the capstone theater class and Madrigals Choir.

At BHHS, Prisand didn't just perform, she inspired. Her discipline, artistry and heart lit up every space she stepped into, earning her recognition in regional competitions and national showcases.

"Bradyn is a true force of talent and perseverance," BHHS Principal Drew Stewart said. "Her dedication to her craft and her ability to connect with audiences and peers alike is extraordinary. We are all cheering her on as she takes this next big step at the University of Michigan."

Observatory celebrates 90 years of celestial exploration

The Griffith Observatory celebrates nine decades of public service, astronomy and observation with activities on Wednesday, May 14, marking the 90th anniversary of the observatory's opening in 1935.

The activities will include a private ceremony, in-person and broadcast presentation from the Leonard Nimoy Event Horizon, a late evening broadcast of the major lunar standstill moonrise and free anniversary buttons for everyone who purchases a ticket to a show in the Samuel Oschin Planetarium.

The observatory will be open to the public from noon-10 p.m. on May 14. The button giveaway will be held throughout the day. At 6:15 p.m., "Celestial Celebrations: 90 Years of Griffith Observatory" and "Stories in the Sky" with Rex Saint Onge, Sr. will be held. Celebrate the observatory's 90th anniversary with Saint Onge, a Chumash cultural advisor for the observatory's original "PST ART" short film "Pacific Standard Universe" (2024). Saint Onge draws from thousands of years of indigenous California astronomy to show how celestial alignments mark significant moments such as birthdays and the observatory's anniversary. The program will be presented live in the Leonard Nimoy Event Horizon and broadcast online. Registration to attend the lecture in person is encouraged but not required.

A live broadcast of the 90th anniversary major lunar standstill southern moonrise (online only) will begin at 9:52 p.m. The observatory continues its marking of the two-year major lunar standstill cycle with a live broadcast on YouTube of the moonrise along the southeast horizon at 10:12 p.m. The broadcast will include information about the major lunar standstill phenomena in 2024 and 2025.

The Griffith Observatory is located at 2800 E. Observatory Road. For information, visit griffithobservatory.org/90th-anniversary.

Apatow to guest curate Academy comedy exhibit

The Academy Museum of Motion Pictures has announced that legendary writer, director and producer Judd Apatow will be the Academy Museum's first guest curator of its newest comedy film exhibition, opening in April 2027, focused on celebrating and presenting the comedy genre and filmmakers.

The announcement occurred on May 2, during the Academy Museum's 20th anniversary celebration and screening of Apatow's hit feature directorial debut, "The 40-Year-Old Virgin" (2005), as part of an onstage conversation between Apatow, Steve Carell, Catherine Keener, Jane Lynch, Gerry Bednob and Kat Dennings in the museum's David Geffen Theater. On the evening of the event, audiences were treated to behind-the-scenes stories of the making of the film and heartfelt moments and anecdotes from Apatow, Carell, Keener, Lynch, Bednob and Dennings on how the classic film came together.

Slated for April 2027, the yet-to-be-titled exhibition is the first Academy Museum exhibition dedicated to the art of comedy in film. Using the resources of the Academy Collection – which includes over 52 million items across the Academy Museum, the Academy's Margaret Herrick Library and the Academy Film Archive – and through original content featuring a diverse range of comedy filmmakers, Apatow will bring his sense of humor and decades of comedy expertise and fandom to the museum exhibition.

"We're thrilled to announce that our first guest curator at the Academy Museum is none other than the hilarious and brilliant Judd Apatow," Academy Museum director and president Amy Homma said. "Judd's comedies have shaped entertainment and culture, and we know his expertise, appreciation and love for the art of comedy will bring a unique exhibition to our audiences."

"The cat is out of the bag. I'll be working with the Academy Museum to showcase some of my favorite films and filmmakers throughout the ages," Apatow said. "I am honored to curate this project alongside the museum's talented team and with access to the Academy Collection. We hope to leave visitors inspired and, of course, with a big smile on their faces."

For information, visit academy-museum.org. The Academy Museum is located at 6067 Wilshire Blvd.

BHPD issues 67 distracted driving citations in two days

The Beverly Hills Police Department cited 67 drivers for hands-free cell phone violations during a distracted driving enforcement operation on April 14 and April 28.

"Despite repeated efforts to warn drivers about the hands-free cell phone law, some drivers continue to use their phones while operating a vehicle," BHPD Chief Mark Stainbrook said. "Our ultimate goal is to change behaviors that help make our roads safer."

California enacted distracted driving laws in 2008. Drivers are not allowed to hold phones or electronic devices while driving, including talking, texting or using an app. Using a handheld cell phone while driving is punishable by a fine. Violating the hands-free law for a second time within 36 months of a prior conviction for the same offense will result in a point being added to a driver's record.

Police warn that drivers must pull over to answer a phone or text.

The enforcement operation on April 14 and April 28 was aimed at reducing the number of people using cell phones behind the wheel.

Before driving, either silence phones or put them somewhere out of reach.

Fine Arts Theatre spotlights Christopher Nolan films

The Fine Arts Theatre Beverly Hills will celebrate the films of award-winning director Christopher Nolan in two separate upcoming film series.

The “2025 Christopher Nolan 70mm Film Series” runs from May 18-Sept. 14. The “Christopher Nolan Non-70mm Film Series,” featuring some of his earlier works based on suggestions made by fans, will be held on Labor Day weekend, beginning on Friday, Aug. 29.

Launching on May 18 with 2010’s “Inception,” the “2025 Christopher Nolan 70mm Film Series” also includes 2014’s “Interstellar,” 2017’s “Dunkirk” (celebrating his first film shot almost entirely in large format), 2020’s “Tenet” and 2023’s “Oppenheimer.”

The “Christopher Nolan non-70mm Film Series” will be held on Labor Day weekend and includes 2000’s “Memento” and “Insomnia” on Aug. 29. The “Batman” trilogy will be shown on Aug. 30 including 2005’s “Batman Begins,” 2008’s “The Dark Knight” and 2012’s “The Dark Knight Rises,” with the highly lauded, chillingly realistic portrayal of the Joker by the late Heath Ledger.

“The Fine Arts Theatre is all about preserving the grand tradition of motion picture exhibition for our patrons of the cinema, especially the 70mm patrons,” said Jerry A. Blackburn, director of public programming.

The Fine Arts Theatre Beverly Hills is located at 8556 Wilshire Blvd. For tickets and information, call (424)438-4013, or visit finearts-theatrebh.com.

VINTAGE PARKLABREA NEWS

Show mom your appreciation on Mother's Day

Dorothy Nelson and her sons Robert, 12, and Leo, 2, were shown in the May 10, 1954, issue of the Park Labrea News in observance of Mother's Day. The Nelson family lived on Fuller Avenue in Park La Brea at the time and were active in the community. Alfred Nelson met Dorothy, who was born in Australia, when he was manager of Pan American Airways. The couple lived in Sydney and San Francisco before moving to Los Angeles. Dorothy described L.A. as having a climate like Sydney and said it felt like home. This year, Mother's Day is observed on Sunday, May 11. For Mother's Day dining and celebrations, see pages 16-18.

Adam Lambert performs as Judas in 'Superstar'

The LA Phil has announced that Grammy-nominated entertainer Adam Lambert has been cast as "Judas" and will star opposite Cynthia Erivo as "Jesus" in a special production of "Jesus Christ Superstar" at the Hollywood Bowl Aug. 1-3.

An award-winning singer/songwriter, actor, producer, philanthropist and LGBTQ+ trailblazer, Lambert has previously been cast in iconic stage roles, most recently his critically acclaimed role of "Emcee" in the Tony Award-winning production of "Cabaret," which marked his official Broadway debut, as well as the first National Tour and Los Angeles Company of "Wicked."

"Jesus Christ Superstar" was originally performed at the Hollywood Bowl in 1971. In addition to lyrics by Tim Rice and music by Andrew Lloyd Webber, the production will be directed and choreographed by Tony Award-winner Sergio Trujillo, conducted and musically directed by Tony and Grammy-winner Stephen Oremus, with casting by The Telsey Office, and is produced in association with Neil Meron and Robert Greenblatt.

"For many Angelenos and concertgoers, the Hollywood Bowl is the premier summer destination for live music," LA Phil President and CEO Kim Noltemy said. "Each season, the LA Phil presents world-class artists in a truly one-of-a-kind setting, and this year is no exception. We're especially thrilled to welcome Adam Lambert to the cast of 'Jesus Christ Superstar' and look forward to sharing this bold, fresh interpretation of a legendary musical, returning to its rock roots, with our audiences."

Tickets for the Hollywood Bowl 2025 summer season are available online at hollywoodbowl.com or via phone at (323)850-2000.

Entertainer Adam Lambert will star in "Jesus Christ Superstar."

The Music Center's vinyl fair spins back around

The Music Center's "On the Record: Vinyl Fair" is the ultimate destination for vinyl lovers. On Saturday, May 17, from 4-8 p.m., the eclectic outdoor hangout returns for a third year on Jerry Moss Plaza at The Music Center to dig into Angelenos' discovery and love of vinyl records. Held in collaboration with The Music Center's Partner Network Initiative, the fair will feature more than 16 vendors selling a variety of music genres, art-making and interactive activities, live DJs dropping beats, a mix CD swap and so much more – including a sound bath-meets-music lounge inside The Music Center's Dorothy Chandler Pavilion. Chill at the onsite bar, enjoy local fare and connect with fellow music lovers as well as vinyl enthusiasts and collectors.

Attendees are encouraged to take public transportation. The Civic Center/Grand Park station along the Metro B Line and Metro D Line is located in Gloria Molina Grand Park with a short walk to Jerry Moss Plaza at The Music Center. Additionally, the plaza is easily accessible by taking Metro's Regional Connector to the Grand Ave Arts/Bunker Hill station along the Metro A Line and E Line. Metrolink's $10 Weekend Day Pass offers easy, free transfers to Metro. Plus, kids ride free on weekends. Learn more and plan a trip at metrolinktrains.com.

Jerry Moss Plaza is located at 135 N. Grand Ave.

For information, visit musiccenter.org/ontherecord.

Visitors can explore extensive vinyl libraries at Jerry Moss Plaza on May 17.

The Kids Mental Health Foundation promotes mental health for children in the U.S.

The Grove sponsors Kids Mental Health Day

The Kids Mental Health Foundation is the nation's leading organization promoting mental health for children in the United States. The foundation will be holding its flagship event, Kids Mental Health Day, a free, all-day community-focused celebration at The Grove in Los Angeles on May 17.

The fun-filled, family-friendly event will be packed with activities and programs designed to boost children's mental health and wellness – along with celebrity volunteers and special surprises. Parents and caregivers will receive free resources created by mental health experts that empower them to raise strong, confident kids ready to take on life's challenges. Educational resources and activities will also be available with the community's needs in mind as they continue to recover and rebuild following the tragic wildfires earlier this year.

The Kids Mental Health Foundation is the leading organization promoting mental health for children in the United States. To achieve its vision to build a world where mental health is a vital part of every child's upbringing, more than 1,000 mental health professionals and researchers at Nationwide Children's Hospital, in partnership with other trusted experts, provide real-world knowledge and expertise to power the foundation's free educational videos, guides and curriculum. Launched in 2018 as The On Our Sleeves Movement for Children's Mental Health, the organization recently expanded its mission as The Kids Mental Health Foundation to reflect the belief that emotional and physical well-being should be treated the same.

To date, more than 24 million people have engaged with the foundation's materials, empowering parents, caregivers, educators, coaches and employers as the guiding force for children's mental health across the United States.

The event will be held at The Grove, located at 189 The Grove Drive, from 10 a.m.-10 p.m. For information, visit kidsmentalhealthfoundation.org/support-kmhf/events/kmhd-2025.

Olivia Munn has been open about her cancer journey.

Munn receives Women's Cancer Research Courage Award

Actress and activist Olivia Munn received the Courage Award at the Women's Cancer Research Fund's "An Unforgettable Evening" benefit at the Beverly Hilton on April 28. Munn was given the award for selflessly sharing her ongoing breast cancer journey and, in doing so, inspiring countless women to take their health into their own hands and get screened for breast cancer.

Describing her cancer diagnosis, Munn said, "Courage in those first days after my breast cancer diagnosis meant letting myself be afraid, being afraid and walking into the void regardless, step by step. The first step I had to take was to walk out of the office and call my husband ... As I struggled to say these words, John just said, 'Come home.'"

Munn publicly shared her cancer journey in March 2024 and brought attention to the Tyer-Cuzick Breast Cancer Risk Assessment test, which was developed by BCRF researcher Dr. Jack Cuzick, and looks at family history in-depth.

"This one test led to my diagnosis of bilateral breast cancer, and it saved my life," said Munn.

Munn then devoted the rest of her speech to her medical team.

"I'd like to especially and eternally thank some very special guests who are with us tonight: the team of doctors who saved my life," she said, recognizing her oncologist, oncological surgeon, reconstructive surgeon, as well as the fertility doctor who helped with the birth of her daughter through surrogacy last September.

Munn has since undergone five surgeries, including a lymph node dissection, a double mastectomy and a hysterectomy.

"I don't wish this journey on anyone; but if you have to face cancer, I pray you meet the kind of doctors that I did," she said. "The nurses, the hospital administrators, everyone along the way here showed me kindness in those scary days."

Television Academy honorees announced

The Television Academy announced on May 1 the recipients of its 18th Television Academy Honors, recognizing six exceptional television programs and their producers who have leveraged the extraordinary power of television to advance social change.

The honorees include four non-scripted programs and two scripted series representing some of the most inspiring and meaningful television of 2024, including "Daughters," "Genius: MLK/X," "Independent Lens: Greener Pastures," "Out of My Mind," "We

Will Dance Again" and "Will & Harper."

Each year, Television Academy Honors celebrates programs across numerous platforms and genres that raise awareness about complex issues facing society. This year's honorees include compelling programs that address transgender identity, friendships and allyship; the legacy of the prison-industrial complex on Black communities; mental health issues in farming families and communities; social justice and racism; the Americans with Disabilities Act and "special needs" students; and the Israel/Palestine conflict.

"Now more than ever, television serves as a powerful platform for information and discourse on important social issues that affect so many of us throughout the world," Television Academy chair Cris Abrego said. "We honor this year's winners for their dedication and commitment to creative and effective storytelling that both educates and motivates audiences around the globe."

Ruskin Group Theatre creates transformative new hub for arts and culture in Santa Monica

Ruskin Group Theatre is expanding its arts programming, which will soon include regular music events, spoken word, acting training and visual arts in addition to professional live theater at its nearly completed new venue at 2800 Airport Ave. in Santa Monica.

John Ruskin's vision to establish a world-class theater in Santa Monica took flight in 2002 at 3000 Airport Ave. – once the Gunnell Maintenance airplane hangar at the Santa Monica Airport. With a determined group of actors, designers and producing partner Michael Myers, the building was transformed into a thriving cultural hub. For more than 23 years, the Ruskin Group Theatre was a cornerstone of the Westside's performing arts scene.

By 2021, the theater's future required a bold new step. Audiences and arts programming grew beyond the confines of the original space, which needed extensive repairs. They located a space at 2800 Airport Ave. – two doors away – once home to the Museum

"I remember being in awe of the height and the perfect bones of the space. I always thought, if we ever had the opportunity to build a bigger theater, this would be the place to do it."

Michael Myers
producing partner

of Flying and a satellite campus for Santa Monica College. In the early 2000s, the college temporarily converted it into a performance space and renovated the main theater.

"It was in 2003 when we were getting ready to open our first show, and people kept wandering in, searching for the SMC temporary theater. They showed me a card, and I walked down to take a look. I remember being in awe of the height and the perfect bones of the space. I always thought, if we ever had the opportunity to build a bigger theater, this would be the place to do it," Myers said.

In 2023, the Ruskin Group Theatre entered into long-term lease negotiations with the city of Santa Monica and enlisted local architect Ralph Mercer to help guide the project. The new Ruskin Arts Center, scheduled to open later this year, is a state-of-the-art facility featuring two performance stages, two multipurpose rooms, an outdoor gathering and performance area and a dedicated meeting space.

To support the expansion, the Ruskin launched a major capital campaign, raising more than $500,000 and securing naming rights for both stages. The Kaplan Family Stage, with a 99-seat capacity, will host top-tier revivals and new works. The Audre, a more intimate 65-seat venue, will be a space for smaller plays and live music.

Ruskin Art Club welcomes author Mark D. Usher for book talk

The Ruskin Art Club is holding "Upcycling Antiquity in Ruskin's 'Unto This Last'" on Thursday, May 15, from 5-7 p.m., via Zoom.

The talk is drawn from author Mark D. Usher's new book "Following Nature's Lead: Ancient Ways of Living in a Dying World." It highlights how Ruskin's "upcycling" of the classical past informs his views on political economy in "Unto This Last." His admiration for Xenophon's "Oeconomicus" is well known. In the book, the author elucidates several other connections that have gone largely unobserved such as Ruskin's debt to Aristotle's critique of money in the "Politics," Plato's arguments about just distribution in the "Republic" and Hesiod's notion of productive limits to wealth in "Works and Days." The book also unpacks Ruskin's allusion to a story about the Gracchi, champions of artisans and agriculturalists in Republican Rome, and his approval of Horace's castigation of the pursuit of private luxury at the expense of the public good.

A24's 'Warfare' favors accurate military combat over theatics

■ The thrilling war film might be available for digital download, but a theatrical experience is the better option

Alex Garland is one of the more original filmmakers of the last decade. So, of course, his portrayal of a war film would stand out. But "Warfare" is more than another notch on his filmography. It's a hyperrealist depiction that only works with someone on the inside.

It's 2006 during the Iraq War. The Battle of Ramadi is underway. The Marines require support from Alpha One, a Navy SEAL platoon. The mission specifics are unclear. But Officer in Charge Erik (Will Poulter) runs the show, as the unit enters a building, posts up and observes the streets as support for a Marine operation. Soon enough, things go wrong, and Alpha One needs to evacuate. But their exit won't be clean or quick.

Garland is an incredible filmmaker. The screenplay for "28 Days Later" and "Dredd," and writing and directing "Ex Machina," "Annihilation" and "Civil War," along with creating Hulu's "Devs." He's a special auteur whose work has singular purpose. In "Warfare," he tries a much more grounded story and seeks out help to do so.

ON SCREEN

Unlike other Garland films, he shares the directing credit with Ray Mendoza, a technical adviser on films like "Lone Survivor," "The Terminal List" and Garland's "Civil War." This time, the former SEAL tells his story in "Warfare." While the names of all but two characters are changed, communications officer Ray Mendoza (D'Pharaoh Woon-A-Tai from "Reservation Dogs") needs no anonymity. As for the other guy, let's keep that a secret for now. No spoilers needed.

"Warfare" is a different kind of war film. Like "Black Hawk Down," it portrays a mission gone wrong, but it doesn't present all points of view or provide spectators with any emotional help through a music score. This one occurs in real time (or close to it), no strings or brass to break up the residual sound.

Events unfold slowly at first. And even when shooting and explosions begin, the platoon's isolated position denies any possible satisfaction that would normally be permitted to filmgoers in such action sequences. Anxiety is king.

Other films like "All Quiet on the Western Front" lay it on thick: War is hell, war is useless. "Warfare" doesn't have much to say about those things. Compare it to "The Hurt Locker." It's more interested in something closer to objective coverage. This is everyday life for soldiers. Let other films debate the merits of war or particular missions.

If the mission in "Warfare" is significant to the war effort, that isn't addressed on screen. We have very little context and even less character development. We don't need it.

"Warfare," a film by Alex Garland and Ray Mendoza, takes audience behind the lines in the Iraq War.

Frankly, most films that try to cover both tend to dumb down the material and manipulate us with too much pathos. This is a more pure, sincere experience.

Things go south – time to go. But the raw emotion and refusal to glamorize military service stand out. This is everything a Michael Bay film is not. No hardbodies, no visual tricks to romanticize weaponry, no single heroic figure taking on 30 foes at once. The human body is frail, so too is the mind. And when those bodies come close to an IED, the mind takes time to catch up. The young men on screen try their best, but they aren't action figures.

Special props to performances by Michael Gandolfini, Charles Melton, Joseph Quinn (soon to be the Human Torch), Cosmo Jarvis (FX's "Shogun") and the other actors who went through a three-week SEAL BUDS bootcamp to prepare.

"Warfare" seems like the first real contender for awards like sound editing or cinematography. As expected from both Garland and A24, it's a memorable, modest story the gets to the point and concludes without room for melodramatics or the average actioner's spectacle.

New directors appointed to Mike Kelley Foundation

The Mike Kelley Foundation for the Arts announced on April 24 the appointment of artist Ken Gonzales-Day, museum leader Lisa Mark and artist Cauleen Smith to its board of directors. They join Chair Edward Rada and members Elizabeth Armstrong, Connie Butler, Gianna Drake-Kerrison, Claire Peeps and Pilar Tompkins Rivas.

"The foundation is thrilled to welcome Ken, Lisa and Cauleen to the board," Rada said. "They bring with them a profound commitment to the arts and arts education, as well as personal connections to the foundation and its mission of supporting critical thinking, risk taking and provocation in the arts. We are fortunate to have their expertise and experience as we look towards the future."

Snehal Desai has been named the artistic director of Center Theatre Group.

Gonzales-Day's interdisciplinary and conceptually grounded projects consider the history of photography, the construction of race and the limits of representational systems from lynching photography to museum displays. His work has been exhibited internationally and is in the permanent collections of the Getty, LACMA, MOCA, MoMA, The National Gallery of Art and the Smithsonian's National Portrait Gallery and American Art Museum.

Mark is the chief of public engagement, learning and impact, at the Museum of Contemporary Art, Los Angeles, where she is responsible for shaping the museum's public-facing programs and initiatives, as well as publications, research and archival projects.

Smith is an interdisciplinary artist whose work reflects upon the everyday possibilities of the imagination. Her work is currently on view at the Hammer in "Alice Coltrane, Monument Eternal" and her film was recently featured in the Museum of Modern Art's Doc Fortnight 2025.

Founded in 2007 by artist Mike Kelley, the Mike Kelley Foundation for the Arts supports artists and arts organizations committed to supporting compelling practices and programs – including experimental projects, lesser-known artists and daring content across a wide range of disciplines. Led by Executive Director Mary Clare Stevens, the organization has furthered Mike Kelley's philanthropic work through the Artists Projects Grants, the Organizational Support Grants and the current Infinite Expanse Expansion Grants, all conceived to support the creation of vital and often difficult-to-produce work in the Los Angeles area. The foundation also preserves

Ken Gonzales-Day, Lisa Mark and Cauleen Smith have been named to the Mikey Kelley Foundation's board.

Mike Kelley's legacy more broadly and advances the understanding of his life and creative achievements through exhibitions, loans from its collections, and providing information and resources to curators, scholars, students and the public.

Brindell Roberts Gottlieb Estate awards CTG major donation

Center Theatre Group announced at its ONE LA Celebration on April 27 that the organization has been awarded a final gift from the Brindell Roberts Gottlieb Estate that creates the naming of the artistic head of the organization as the Brindell & Milton Gottlieb Artistic Director.

"Snehal Desai will hold the title as the Brindell & Milton Gottlieb Artistic Director in recognition of the extraordinary resources and tremendous service that the Gottliebs provided to Center Theatre Group over the past quarter century," Center Theatre Group Board President Amy R. Forbes said.

"Two years ago, I was honored to be named just the third Artistic Director in Center Theatre Group's storied history," Desai said. "And now, I am grateful to be the first artistic leader to be called the Brindell & Milton Gottlieb Artistic Director. The Gottliebs and I both strongly believed in the transcendental power of the arts, and I could not be prouder to represent this belief and carry on their legacy here at CTG."

Roberts Gottlieb joined the Center Theatre Group Board of Directors in 1999. She became an Emeritus member in 2021. Together, Brindell and Milton chaired the CTG Act Two Campaign, contributing five million dollars for the renovation of the Mark Taper Forum completed just after its 40th year in 2008. Brindell passed away in the fall of 2024, pre-deceased by Milton in 2006.

Altogether, Brindell and Milton provided over twenty-five years of support, and contributed well over $10 million to Center Theatre Group, one of the largest and most meaningful commitments in the history of the organization. For information, visit centertheatregroup.org.

L.A. Jewish Health leader recognized for work on behalf of seniors

Los Angeles Jewish Health CEO and president Dale Surowitz was recognized with the Valley Economic Alliance's Humanitarian Award on April 17 at the 30th anniversary Valley of the Stars Awards Gala.

The event, which took place at the Hilton Los Angeles in Universal City, celebrated Surowitz's work on behalf of some of the most vulnerable members of the community. Surowitz acknowledged the role his LAJH coworkers have played in his success.

"This Humanitarian Award is not just a personal award – it belongs to the entire LAJH family," he said. "It reflects the unwavering dedication of our staff and volunteers, who bring our mission of compassionate care to life every day."

Surowitz joined LAJH in 2020, bringing more than three decades of experience leading hospitals and health care organizations. His career has been driven by a focus on improving quality of life for a broad range of residents.

"I believe we have an ethical and social responsibility to take care of those who don't have the ability to care for themselves," Surowitz said. "At Los Angeles Jewish Health, we work together to uplift our community's seniors and treat them with the respect and dignity they deserve."

Valley Economic Alliance CEO and president Sonya Blake said Surowitz has had a profound impact.

"We are proud to present the Humanitarian Award to Dale," Blake said. "His unwavering commitment to leading an organization that provides exceptional care and support to our seniors is truly inspiring and strengthens the fabric of our community."

The Humanitarian Award is among a long list of honors Surowitz has received throughout his career including the Fernando Award, the Community Leadership Award from MAPS Charities and the Heart of Gold Award from the Child Development Institute. He is also a member of Los Angeles Mayor Karen Bass' Valley Advisory Board.

Surowitz oversees LAJH, the largest nonprofit, single-source provider of comprehensive senior health care in the greater Los Angeles area. From independent and assisted living to short-term rehabilitation, skilled nursing and a leading PACE adult day health care program, LAJH serves more than 4,000 seniors each year.

Explore Buddhist art at LACMA

Ancient artwork from across Asia will soon be on view at LACMA.

The Los Angeles County Museum of Art will present "Realms of the Dharma: Buddhist Art Across Asia" beginning May 11. International in scope, the exhibition examines key concepts of Buddhist thought and practice through sculptures, paintings, textiles and ritual objects. Incorporating 180 works of pan-Asian Buddhist art, "Realms of the Dharma" begins with the religion's origins in India in the fifth century B.C.E. and follows its spread through Southeast Asia, the Himalayas and East Asia.

This exhibition will be on view through July 12, 2026.

For information, visit lacma.org/press/realms-dharma-buddhist-art-across-asia. LACMA is located at 5905 Wilshire Blvd.

10 Reasons Why I Don't Want An Estate Plan

1. I want large sums of my hard-earned money to go to a law firm.
2. I want the government to decide who gets my life savings.
3. What for? My house is only worth a half-million dollars.
4. I really don't care who raises our children.
5. I want a total stranger to go through all of my personal papers and financial affairs.
6. I like family fights – especially unnecessary ones.
7. I don't care who inherits my hard earned money.
8. I've been messy in life; I'll be messy in death.
9. They say you can't take it with you, but what if you can?
10. Probate. Must be fun.

If you don't do it for yourself, please do it for those you care about.

State asks for federal film tax credit plan film powerhouse, and California is all in to bring more production here," Newsom said. "Building on our successful state program, we're eager to partner with the Trump administration to further strengthen domestic production and Make America Film Again."

According to Newsom's office, the program – which currently offers $330 million in annual credits – has been "a home run success," and that for every tax credit dollar approved, $1.07 in tax revenue is earned. The governor's office also said that $24.10 in output, $16.14 in gross domestic product and $8.60 in wages results from each tax credit dollar.

Currently, the California Legislature is considering the Film & TV Jobs Act, which would increase the tax credit amount to $750 million. Other states, like Georgia and Louisiana, also have lucrative tax incentives, which has negatively impacted production in Los Angeles. Last week, the L.A. City Council unanimously approved a motion that would look to reduce permitting costs for productions. The council will also vote May 9 on supporting the Film & TV Jobs Act.

Since the January wildfires, the grassroots organization Stay in LA has advocated for studios to return production to California to help bolster the local economy, hire unemployed workers and to cement the area's foothold on the film and television industry.

"We're finally on the radar – as one team, one country," Stay in LA co-founder Pamala Buzick Kim said. "Now let's make sure we've got our commercial and post family covered and roll out our red carpet."

"We know that a national film tax credit will level the field with other countries that are luring productions away from Los Angeles and the United States."

-U.S. Rep. Laura Friedman

"A federal film incentive is long overdue. It is smart industrial policy," said Adam Fowler, a representative of the consulting firm CVL Economics. "Film and television are rare U.S. industries that combine high-skilled jobs, global exports, and cultural influence. While other countries treat screen production as a strategic export and support it with national policy, the United States has left the responsibility to states with limited tools and balanced-budget constraints. A federal incentive puts us back in the global game and on a level playing field."

Upon taking office in January, Trump named actors Jon Voight, Mel Gibson and Sylvester Stallone as leaders in helping return film and television production to the United States. The tariff idea reportedly resulted from a meeting between Trump and Voight.

Rep. Laura Friedman (D-Glendale) has been an advocate for a federal film and television tax credit, and she said she is ready to discuss the issue with the president and Voight.

"I'm happy to work with him and anyone else, including the administration, on real solutions that are tested," she said. "And that makes sense, because we know that a national film tax credit will level the field with other countries that are luring productions away from Los Angeles and the United States."

Friedman also said that she would explain to her Congressional colleagues that the industry is "money well spent."

"I would point out that we have 2.3 million jobs in this industry nationwide, and that the industry accounts for almost $230 billion in total wages – and that's direct wages. There are more than 122,000 businesses across the U.S. that have a connection with the film and television industry," she said. "For the past 100 years – more than 100 years ... we have captured the hearts and minds of so many people around the world, being able to show them what it's like to be an American – what our values are, what our country is about, and you can't put a dollar figure on that."

High production costs have kept some L.A. studios such as Paramount relatively quiet.

California Assemblyman Rick Chavez Zbur (D-Hollywood) and Sen. Ben Allen (D-Santa Monica), both authors of the Film & TV Jobs Act, applauded Newsom's proposal.

"A federal incentive program would certainly go a long way in retaining domestic production and keep our creative workforce here in the United States," Allen said. "Many other countries are doing this, so it would be beneficial for us to compete with these programs. Importantly, tax incentives would help avoid any potential reciprocal tariffs placed on our production exports that could affect our standing in the global marketplace."

Zbur said, though, the state should remain focused on its own legislation.

"In the meantime, however, California's film and TV industry faces Depression-era levels of unemployment and business loss," Zbur said. "That's why we must keep our eye on the ball and pass the California Film & TV Jobs Act – to modernize and strengthen the program and ensure California remains competitive with other states and countries."

Saks project hearing continued in Beverly Hills rehabilitation of the 9600 Wilshire Blvd. building will transform it into a 42-room boutique hotel with a private social club and spa open to the public. Immediately to its west, a new residential building will contain one level of ground-floor retail and six levels of apartments.

At the south end of the project, plans include two new apartment buildings on sites currently occupied by parking lots. The "Residential West" building between Bedford and Peck drives will contain 28 apartments and over 7,500 square feet of "small neighborhood shops." A similar building, "Residential East" between Peck and Camden drives, will also contain 28 apartments and over 7,500 square feet of retail.

The apartment buildings to the south are separated from the retail, office and hotel buildings on Wilshire Boulevard by a pedestrian and car-accessible "via" between Bedford and Peck drives and a pedestrian-only terrace between Peck and Camden drives.

The project will also include an underground parking structure located beneath the east and west residential buildings, with 744 parking spaces.

According to Adams, developers made several changes to the project after conducting community outreach, which included more than 250 meetings with neighbors. Adams said anticipated traffic was reduced by 9%, with an 18% increase in public open space.

The office space was reduced by 65%, and eight residential units were added. The new project will be 60% residential, as opposed to the original 45.4% residential. Additionally, developers added four valet stations, creating four times the original onsite queueing capacity.

While developers have adjusted the uses of the space, the total scope of the project remains approximately 494,000 square feet.

Existing commercial space makes up approximately 145,000 square feet of the project, Adams said.

The project has received mixed feedback from the community. At the meeting on May 1, many attendees in favor and opposed spoke about the project. Approximately 40 people spoke in public comments at the meeting, with additional written comments read aloud.

Proponents supported the project for revitalizing a "sleepy" section of Wilshire Boulevard, promoting economic growth and boosting public safety through increased foot traffic.

"This project is an incredible opportunity to bring new life and energy into our neighborhood," said Julie Auerbach, a resident of South Bedford Drive. "By combining condominiums, a hotel, vibrant retail shops, streetscapes, pedestrian and greenspaces, it creates an epicenter of community where people can live, work and gather ...

It brings more economic growth and a stronger sense of community, transforming our neighborhood into a thriving, inclusive destination we can all be proud of."

The project is supported by the Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce and Unite Here Local 11, a labor union representing hospitality workers.

Critics of the project said it is too large, and will have adverse effects on traffic in the surrounding neighborhood. Residents expressed many concerns over the construction impacts of the project. Construction is currently expected to last approximately 50 months.

"Please consider our residential area and the lasting impacts this project will have on our residential quality of life," said Ken Goldman, president of the Southwest Beverly Hills Homeowners Association. "If approved, it must include definitive conditions to mitigate the traffic and other impacts."

Some residents said the developers have not done enough to address the concerns of neighbors, even after holding meetings with residents.

In addition to the Southwest

Beverly Hills Homeowners Association, the project is opposed by Creed LA – the Coalition for Responsible Equitable Economic Development – and local labor unions, including ironworkers, sheet metal workers and plumbers. Union representatives said the developers have not expressed a commitment in hiring skilled workers from the community.

Following extensive public comment, planning commissioners examined many aspects of the project. After the meeting went on for several hours – past 1 a.m. – Commission Chair Terri Kaplan suggested continuing the meeting to a future date.

"The project and the community are better served, in my opinion, if we do this deliberation portion of this with fresh, well-rested minds," Kaplan said.

Commissioners encouraged the developers to continue working with community members on traffic mitigation measures before returning on June 10.

A spokesperson for the project said Saks Fifth Avenue did not have an additional comment following the meeting.

Principal plans to leave Beverly Hills High asked to be an interim assistant principal at the high school. In 2022, he became a co-principal of the high school alongside Kim Decatrel, before serving as the school's sole principal for the past two school years.

"It's been incredible. I owe BHUSD an enormous debt of gratitude for taking a leap of faith on me as somebody that had not previously been an administrator and asking me to step into that role," Stewart said. "I've learned a ton – I've learned most of what I know for instructional leadership in my time here. It's been great. It's an amazing community. We have incredible staff members, great teachers. I've really enjoyed it and it was a very difficult decision for me to make to leave."

Stewart highlighted the launch of BHUSD's professional learning communities – programs for teachers to meet and work collaboratively – as one of his achievements while principal. Additionally, under Stewart's leadership, the high school's counseling team was named a Recognized ASCA Model Program by the American School Counselor Association. The RAMP designation for comprehensive, data-informed school counseling is held by only 17 other high schools in California, and approximately 1,000 schools nationwide. Beverly Hills High School also recently earned accreditation from the Western Association of Schools and Colleges for the next six years.

"In general, I would say [I'm] really proud of the work we've been doing to move school culture," Stewart added. "That is still a work in progress, but we're very happy with the work we've been doing ... Working diligently to listen to all of our students to understand what we still need to be working on. We have been taking steps to try to make sure that we are hearing all of our students on campus and moving in ways that we can continue to try to enfranchise all different student groups on our campus."

Stewart said his biggest challenge as principal was the "direct aftermath" of the 2024 presidential election.

In November 2024, the high school was the site of a raucous demonstration of students celebrating the election of President Donald Trump. Dozens of pro-Trump students crowded the school's courtyard to celebrate Trump's victory. A TikTok video that went viral captured the moment students roared in applause as others shouted, "four more years" and waved Trump flags. At one point, a school security guard could be seen holding up a Trump flag.

The incident led to several controversies and a lawsuit. A student who participated in the demonstration alleged that the district's executive director of school safety put his hands around his neck during the demonstration. Many parents, students and alumni alleged that journalism teacher Romeo Carey was wrongfully suspended for allowing his students to report on the alleged incident. After months of outcry and "very serious concerns" from the ACLU, Carey was reinstated.

Additionally, two Black teachers are currently suing the school district, alleging racism and discrimination that intensified following the election. Black students also alleged they were racially targeted by pro-Trump students. In a separate claim, a former teacher alleged she was wrongfully terminated for criticizing Trump and the student demonstration on her personal Facebook page.

"I've really taken pride in the fact that since that time period, we have really taken steps and measures to try and make sure that we're listening to all of our students and understanding what they need from our school," Stewart said.

In February, former BHUSD Superintendent Dr. Michael Bregy resigned. The district has since undergone leadership changes, eliminating and restructuring several administrative positions.

Stewart said his decision to leave the school district was not related to the administrative changes, but instead a personal choice. Stewart said his long commute to Beverly Hills – approximately two hours – began to take a toll on his work-life balance. His new position will greatly reduce his commute and allow him to spend more time with his family.

Stewart said he will miss the relationships he's made through the BHUSD community above all else.

"It really is a community here, and I've gotten engrained in that community over the last eight years. I'm going to miss the relationships with staff, students, parents and the broader community at large," Stewart said. "It's rare that you have an opportunity in a high school setting to speak with members of the City Council, but that's a unique thing that we have here, and they listen to us and want to know what the city can do to support the school. The kind of 360 support that the district has and provides for its students is pretty remarkable here."

He said he hopes the next Beverly Hills High School principal is someone who is compassionate, understands the importance of building relationships and is laser-focused on instruction and improving academics.

"It's a very unique place, very unique city, very unique high school," Stewart said. "Coming in and taking some time to understand the lay of the land would serve [the next principal] very well as they start to prepare and plan for whatever their goals are going to be going forward."

In a statement, BHUSD Superintendent Dr. Alex Cherniss thanked Stewart for his time in BHUSD and echoed Stewart's hopes for the next principal.

"We're grateful to Mr. Stewart for his leadership," Cherniss said. "I'm committed to bringing in a principal who will raise academic outcomes, build strong campus culture and partner with families to support every student's success."

Joe Hollendorner spoke at the May 3 annual fundraiser.

Donors raise funds for LGBT Center

On May 3, hundreds of the Los Angeles LGBT Center's sustaining donors gathered at the Anita May Rosenstein Campus in Hollywood for a reimagining of the annual fundraiser. The event, L.A. Forever, was a celebration of Los Angeles' LGBTQ+ community and those who have generously contributed to the Look What Love Can Do fund. A fund established to prove love, not hate, is what the community needs most during politically challenging times.

At LA Forever, the center honored two extraordinary champions: Sheryl Lee Ralph, who has stood with the LGBTQ+ community since the early days of the HIV/AIDS crisis, and Dr.

Johanna Olson-Kennedy, a trailblazer in transgender youth healthcare. Their courage reminds everyone of what is possible when they choose to show up for one another – again and again, no matter the risk.

Center CEO Joe Hollendorner spoke about the unprecedented challenges the center is facing. In a matter of months, the center has lost $4.6 million in federal funding, with another $6 million on the line.

In response to the budget and humanitarian crisis, attendees helped the center raise nearly $800,000. For information and to donate, visit lalgbtcenter.org. The L.A. LGBT Center is located at 1625 Schrader Blvd.

WeHo hosts events for seniors during Older Adults Month

West Hollywood is celebrating Older Adults Month in May with a series of free community events.

In partnership with Cedars-Sinai, the city will host the Older Adult Community Health Fair on Thursday, May 8, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Plummer Park Community Center, 7377 Santa Monica Blvd. The health fair will include free blood glucose, blood pressure and cholesterol screenings, emergency preparedness and trauma prevention resources and information from local organizations. The city's Rent Stabilization Division will offer a "Know Your Rights" workshop from 10:30-11:30 a.m.

The free ADA-accessible Cityline transit service will run every 30 minutes to the fair from 9:30 a.m.-2 p.m. with stops at West Hollywood Library, 625 N. San Vicente Blvd.; the corner of Crescent Heights and Santa Monica Boulevard; and at Plummer Park. Cityline will also continue regular service. For information and a route map, visit weho.org/cityline.

The city will host the 20th annual Older Adults Service Awards during a special televised meeting of the Older Adults Advisory Board on Wednesday, May 14, at 2 p.m. in the City Council Chambers, 625 N. San Vicente Blvd. This year's honoree is Richard Colbert, who is being recognized for his outstanding contributions to the community.

On Wednesday, May 14, at 2:30 p.m., the city is holding a National Honor Your LGBT Elders Day Stand Up Comedy Performance at the Los Angeles LGBT Center's Davidson/Valentini Theatre at the Village at Ed Gould Plaza, 1125 N. McCadden Place. Join the Los Angeles LGBT Center and Jewish Family Service L.A. in honoring LGBTQ seniors. To RSVP, call (323)422-0291 or email mgold-shteyn@jfsls.org.

The city is holding "Mindfulness: Mastering Past, Present and Future Living" on Wednesday, May 14, from 3:30-5 p.m., via Zoom. The virtual workshop will focus on the power of living in the present moment. For information, email jivanova@weho.org. To register, visit go.weho.org/42txPv.

The city, in partnership with ONE Generation, will host a "Utility Assistance and Energy Conservation" workshop on Thursday, May 15, from 10 a.m.-noon at the West Hollywood Park Aquatic and Recreation Center's Doheny Room, 8750 El Tovar Place.

"Be Well WeHo Making My Smartphone Work for Me/Avoiding Unexpected App and Data Charges" will be held on Tuesday, May 20, from noon-1:30 p.m. at the West Hollywood Park Aquatic and Recreation Center's Doheny Room. To register, visit go.weho.org/43Zuvhd.

The "Seniors in Action: Community + Connection + Conversation" monthly workshop will be held on Tuesday, May 20, from 2-3:30 p.m. at the West Hollywood Park Aquatic and Recreation Center. For information, call (323)422-0291.

For information on Older Adults Month event, visit weho.org.

WeHo makes changes to planning process the world, that's just ridiculous. We're 1.9 square miles," she said.

Conversely, Vice Mayor John Heilman approved the item, though he admitted he came into it with "serious doubts and concerns."

"But I do agree with the basic concerns [Erickson] raised," Heilman said. "We need more housing for all income levels. We need to figure out how to eliminate unnecessary delays in both the approval and building process. We need to look at how we can reduce the cost of building new housing, and we need to ensure that developers are building housing which meets the needs of our community."

He said that some of the items in the ordinance still "provide too many benefits for developers and insufficient protections for the community" and that he hopes city staff "returns with options which help expedite housing while safeguarding" residents.

Mayor Chelsea Byers said that the city does "want community members engaged in their neighborhoods" to help inform "meaningful" policymaking. As such, changes were made to the initial ordinances, including exceptions for community feedback regarding mixed-used properties and hotels.

"The current process drives up costs to the city and the project at the expense of the community, and we are delaying the ability to accomplish the important work of building housing," Byers said. "By looking at the permitting process which is meant to serve our housing goals, we identified and removed unnecessary steps and saw other opportunities to align steps to create efficiency. It is a matter of good governance to evolve processes that are no longer serving the needs of the community."

Many residents spoke out with a variety of concerns about how expedited process might negatively affect community members.

"While new housing is great, it's not so great to promote buildings that won't be covered by rent control," resident Michael Russnow said.

"The people that oppose this are not against affordable housing, and we're not against progress. We're against being left out of the conversation," resident Kathy Blavis said.

"I am concerned about what this would do to incentivize the demolition of rent-stabilized housing," resident

Rick Watts said. "Because once that's gone, it's gone."

Watts also said he was concerned that some of the new housing built wouldn't be affordable.

"Part of the problem with corporate landlords is they have the market muscle to be able to withhold units off of the market, and perhaps one of the things you might want to do is consider a vacancy tax," Watts added.

But others pointed to how the streamlining would help benefit housing production, with many saying that increased housing production will make the city more affordable for more people.

"This is good governance that we're doing," resident Christopher Russell said, pointing out that the city was at a 6.6% rental vacancy rate, which he said signals a tight housing market. "That has upward pressure on rents."

"Let's chart a path forward that empowers government to make our communities a better place, and make sure that we can deliver on the promise that we have without the opposition of a disgruntled minority," resident Zennon Ulgate-Crow said.
